New Automobile Speed $100,000,000? Bagatelle Welcoming Dear Uncle The Indians' Drum

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

AT DAYTONA, FLA., yesterday, Maj. Segrave, a British sportsman, ran his Golden Arrow automobile, which looks like a sharp dagger, at a speed better than 231 miles an hour.

This is interesting but not important, except as it encourages production of better metal and more reliable machinery.

The speed reached has no value, since it cannot be used on the surface of the earth; nevertheless, it is encouraging. If men can go 231 miles an hour on the ground, how fast will they go through the air?

One thousand miles an hour some day, around the earth with the sun overhead all the way.

New York city spends every year as much as the national government used to spend before the war, yesterday ordered tunnels and bridges to cost $107,000,000.

Once that would have been called "a great deal of money." The nation hesitated about spending $350,000,000 on the Panama canal.

Now individual Wall Street firms organize $100,000,000 concerns with little discussion and no emotion at all. Figures and wealth are growing bigger.

How willing Europe is to take dear Uncle Sam into the World Court. He may be "Uncle Shylock," but how pleasant it would be to tie him up with decisions of a foreign court, voting ten to one against him.

"Do whatever you please," says Europe to Uncle Sam, "if only we can get our hands on you."

An interesting explanation of Mexican revolutionists' success in taking [illegible] Yaqui Indians were with the rebel [illegible] and others were [illegible] Marxian creed.

[illegible] a wise conclusion [illegible] would be from [illegible] saying tell-[illegible] Mexico [illegible] among the most devout of the Catholic population and [illegible] with the revolutionists.

Such announcements [illegible] best uncertain, [illegible] little doubt as to [illegible] suit.

There is no doubt at all that American airplane manufacturers are busy, thanks to this Mexican war.

The Yought Airplane factory on Long Island is working day and night turning out a fleet of swift fighting airplanes ordered by Mexico. Other American factories, with the approval of Washington, are engaged in the same work.

The most ardent revolutionist on the ground has little chance against bullets and bombs from the air.

Misguided human beings, including British Tories, have said that universal suffrage is bad. "Why," they ask, "should the ignorant, debased masses be allowed to vote when they cannot possibly understand government?"

In London, at present, the Tories are being answered their own question, with a frantic effort to clean up the slums and thus get votes for the Conservative party at the coming election.

The masses may be too ignorant to understand government, but they are not too ignorant to understand misery.

When you let everybody vote, the man in power must worry about EVERYBODY, instead of worrying only about his own class. For that reason it was very important to give women the vote.

Politicians might ask, "What do the women want?" And try to give it to them.

Tells Hindenburg of Reparation Bank

Berlin, March 12 (INS)—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, head of the Reichsbank and leader of the German delegation to the reparation conference in Paris, today made a long report to President Von Hindenburg and ministers.

The details included the proposal for creation of an international bank to collect German reparations and distribute them to the creditor nations.

EXCHANGE ST. INQUIRY PUBLIC

Representatives of two Boston banks, a prominent real estate operator and many other individuals have been questioned in private by the Finance Commission in connection with the $1,750,000 Exchange st. widening project.

This was revealed today as the commission made final preparations for public hearings on the matter.

It was further disclosed at City Hall that in private sessions the Finance Commission examined the bank accounts of some City Council members and other persons, and that on the basis of this scrutiny

70 WOMEN FLEE GAS FUMES

Overcome by sulphur dioxide fumes, Mrs. Susie McWilliams, 39, of Lavra ave., Quincy, was rescued by Julian Sprague, a member of her force today while 70 other women and girl employes fled the Sprague Specialty Co. factory in Hancock st., Quincy.

The woman was taken to City hospital, where she was treated for several hours and then sent home.

An explosion of sulphur dioxide gas was released in the plant when a repair man, working on an electric refrigerator, removed a unit containing the substance and then accidentally kicked the unit over.

JAILED IN DEFAULT OF $5000 IN WINSLOW CASE

New York, March 12 (AP)—Meyer Kaplan, a former convict, testified today that when his probation was revoked by Federal Judge Francis A. Winslow and he was sent to Atlanta penitentiary, Marcus Helfand, an attorney, told him he was being imprisoned because he had not paid $5,000.

Kaplan was under cross-examination today at the hearing before Federal Judge John Knox to determine whether Helfand should be barred from practice.

On direct examination yesterday he testified that when he was convicted, Helfand had boasted of intimacy with Judge Winslow and said he could get him probation, for a consideration.

He gave Helfand $5,000, Kaplan said, and a few days later was placed on probation. Later the probation was revoked and he was sent to Atlanta. He said Helfand told him he was imprisoned for failure to pay a second $5,000 agreed upon between them.

BORDER PATROLMEN WOUNDED IN FIGHT WITH GUN-RUNNERS

El Paso, Tex., March 12 (AP)—An attempt to smuggle arms and ammunition across the international border was frustrated late last night after a gun battle in which two American patrolmen were wounded.

Washington, March 12 (AP)—Movement of a small body of troops to the Mexican border for the protection of Naco, Ariz., and to guard the water supply of Bisbee was reported to the War Department today by Maj.-Gen. Lassiter, commanding of the Eighth Army Corps area at San Antonio.

At the request of the local authorities in Arizona, a company of the 25th Infantry and a troop of the 10th Cavalry were dispatched by Col. Douglas McCuskey from Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., to the border.

The authorities there had become uneasy over the activities of the Mexican revolutionists across the border from Naco, and appealed for army protection.

Bulletins!

Nogales, Ariz., March 12 (AP)—A Southern Pacific of Mexico train from the southwest coast of Mexico brought 20 American citizens to Nogales today from Culiacan, Sinaloa, and surrounding country which has been traversed by the rebels in their march to the south against Mazatlan.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 12 (A.P.)—Alfonso Pesqueria, Mexican consul here, received a telegram from Emilio Portes Gil, President of Mexico, today denying reports that foreign aviators were being employed by the federal Government in the revolution.

Mexico City, March 12 (INS)—Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, former President and now War Secretary, is massing 20,000 Federals opposite the rebels on the Torreon front for an immediate decisive engagement which may decide the outcome of the revolution.

Another important engagement is threatened at Saltillo, where the rebels have entrenched in the path that Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan must take to join forces with Gen. Calles.

According to advices received here from the arena of war, Gen. Calles' army of the center is within 50 miles of the main rebel force.

Wilkins' Thrilling Tale of Antarctic

Herewith is presented the first installment of Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins' thrilling exclusive detailed narrative of his epochal flights in the Antarctic last December which attracted world-wide attention and resulted in important discoveries that have revised the existing textbooks of geography.

Capt. Wilkins arrives in New York today from the Antarctic. The manuscript of his thrilling narrative and the exclusive photographs accompanying it were sent by airmail from Havana, Cuba, where his steamer touched en route.

New York, March 12—My third Antarctic journey is ended. Years ago, toiling at the end of a heavy oar, I struggled for 14 days at the feet of the Antarctic's majestic mountains and in that time mapped some 30 miles of coastline.

Throughout every waking hour I was awed by the stupendous majesty of the scenes unfolded. Every foot of the way positions on the Torreon front early today. A general action was expected within 24 hours.

Long lines of troop trains, carrying reinforcements and large quantities of artillery and airplane parts rolled northward steadily all night through Aguascalientes, Zacatecas and Coahuila, all headed for the front. Gen. Calles' strategy called for the concentration of 20,000 troops and heavy forces of artillery as well as bombing planes.

It was expected that, in addition to bombarding the rebel positions with artillery and planes, Gen. Calles would employ about 15,000 troops in a grand assault upon the rebel works. The rebels, so far as known here, have less than 10,000 troops on the Coahuila-Durango frontier.

It was not known here until today that Saltillo, west of Monterrey, is still held by rebels, an official announcement admitting that insurgents were in control of the city.

The army of the North, under Gen. Almazan, which was to March upon Saltillo, has been delayed by destroyed railway tracks, but is expected to move forward at once.

The fact that the rebels stand between Gen. Almazan and the army of the center may prevent Gen. Almazan from playing any part in the battle on the Torreon line.

Rebel Troops Mass in Preparation for Big Battle

Nogales, Ariz., March 12 (AP)—Mexican revolutionary leaders along the border were silent today as they awaited the drawing up of battle lines near Torreon and Mazatlan and the approach of the crisis in their attempt to overthrow the Mexico City government.

A colorful army of 2000 rebels, consisting largely of Yaqui and Mayo Indians, was camped at Agua Prieta, Sonora, this morning. They were recruited from various points in Sonora and are being moved into Chihuahua, from there they are to move south to join the armies of Gen. Juan Gonzalo Escobar, commander-in-chief of the revolutionary forces, in an attempt to stem the advance of the Mexican federal forces under Gen. Calles.

Revolutionary leaders said this detachment would need at least two days to effect a junction with Escobar's men and that this rebel general needed the 2000 fighters to face Calles.

In the west, attention was centered on the cautious advance of rebels toward Mazatlan, Sinaloa, where the loyal federal Gen. Jaime Carrillo is entrenched with 2000 men. This advance is being conducted by Gen. Ramon F. Iturbe, about 5000 rebels are said to be converging upon Mazatlan from various points.

Many Americans crossed the international line to see the revolutionists at Naco. Attention was centered on the equipment of the insurgents which consisted of late model Enfield and Winchester rifles. Every soldier carried two or three cartridge belts and a bayonet.

Newspaper men who visited the camp were surprised to find a large amount of American money in circulation among the rebel soldiers, a total of $10,000 was packed in money boxes near detachment headquarters, occupied by Gen. Augustun Olochea and Roman Yocupicio, the latter a Yaqui Indian.

Mexico Press Says Hoover to Stick to Coolidge Policy

Mexico City, March 12 (AP)—The newspaper Excelsior, under the caption "The Attitude of Washington," today expresses the opinion that President Hoover will carry on the Coolidge policies regarding Mexico.

The paper says that the action of the United States in maintaining the arms embargo against the rebels who are seeking munitions is a natural result of the present good relations between the neighbor governments.

It adds that the United States has complied with its international duties just as Mexico will should the situation arise.

Florence Warden, Noted Writer, Dies

London, March 12 (AP)—Mrs. Florence James, more widely known as Florence Warden, novelist, who wrote "The House on the Marsh" and many other popular works, is dead, aged 71. Miss Warden was born in Middlesex in 1857 and was on the stage from 1880 till 1885.

Washington, March 12 (INS)—"Whoopee" came to the White House today. "Whoopee" is a salt-and-pepper Schnauzer puppy, and was sent to the Hoovers as a gift from Frances Lillian Gunsaul of Chicago.

The pup's registered name, according to the tag accompanying him, is "Druis Von Baden-Baden," but that is too much of a name for such a little dog, so "Whoopee" was substituted.

Soviets Celebrate 12th Anniversary

Moscow, March 12 (AP)—Soviet Russia today celebrated the 12th anniversary of the outbreak of the revolution which resulted in the abdication of the Czar.

The official Communist organ, Pravda, in an editorial, said: "Twelve years have elapsed from the day of the Czar's fall. We are now in the think of socialist building, but we are building in hostile surroundings with a circle of imperialist enemies."

SUMMARY OF MEXICO WAR

Developments today in the Mexican situation follow:

1—Stiff opposition to the envelloping Federal advance appeared likely today as rebel troops concentrated heavily at Torreon to meet the northern drive of General Calles. Federal generalissimo. Additional U. S. troops today were ordered to border duty in Arizona.

2—General Almazan, Federal commander at Monterey, announced he was planning to advance on Saltillo with an army of 10,000 men in an effort to drive back the insurgents on their Torreon base.

3—Government circles generally expressed belief that the rebel movement would disintegrate rapidly as the Federal forces approached, but the revolutionary leaders gave every indication of putting up strong resistance.

4—General Calles was reported to have reached Camacho with the advance guard of his powerful army, but between this point and Torreon was an almost waterless desert.

5—The rebels reported destruction of railway bridges between Camacho and Torreon which would hold the Federals up several days giving the insurgents an opportunity to gather strong reinforcements for General Escobar, rebel commander-in-chief.

6—In Sinaloa, the insurgents were continuing a cautious advance down the Southern Pacific Railway toward Mazatlan, where 2000 federals were strongly entrenched.

7—This advance was being conducted by Gen. Iturbe with 5000 men converging upon Mazatlan from various points.

8—The Government today announced confiscation of the property of the chief rebel leaders, Generals Cruz, Maso and Aguirre, as well as that of Governor Fausto Topete of Sonora. The property was valued at several hundred thousand dollars.

9—The Government denied it was using foreign aviators.

10—Gen. Simon Aguirre, brother of Gen. Jesus Aguirre, defeated Vera Cruz insurgent leader, was captured and is being held for court martial.

Fake Wire Men Find Golf Club Box Empty

Two men posing as electric wire inspectors today visited the Norfolk Golf Club house on East st., Westwood, ransacked the locker room, opened the cash register, and left empty handed.

Mrs. Edward Maguire, wife of the steward, who was alone in the clubhouse when the men arrived in a small car, said after going through the locker room they asked her to change a $50 bill. When she replied she was unable to do so, the men opened the cash box, but found no money.

decided to conduct the public hearings which will begin this week.

It is understood that all the individuals quizzed, including the bank representatives and other men of prominence, will be summoned to appear as witnesses in public.

Summonses have already been made out by the commission to bring the banking records of city councillors and others before it in public session, but it was said today that only about one-tenth of the data on these accounts will be the subject of questioning, the rest having been ruled aside as irrelevant during private examination of the documentary evidence.

Date for the first session of the public hearing will be set late today.

Land taken for the widening project is costing the city $1,750,000, although assessed for only a fraction of that amount. The appraisers are declared to have taken future value into consideration. The location is in the heart of the financial district.

Driver Accused of Injuring Boy, 6

Charged with being the operator of the stolen automobile which injured six-year-old James Torfney of West Sixth st., South Boston, on March 1, James Kelley, 19, who lives next door to the boy, was arraigned in South Boston court today.

Kelley was found not guilty of a charge of drunkenness. He pleaded not guilty to charges of larceny of the automobile of Harrett Burns of Payson rd., Belmont, to operating while under the influence of liquor, to driving so as to endangre lives and to two other violations of the automobile laws and was held in $1000 for the grand jury.

Mary Garden Says Talkies Will Crowd Out Grand Opera

Oakland, Cal., March 12 (INS)—"Talkies" are crowding out what chances grand opera may have, believes Mary Garden, famous operatic diva, who arrived here today for an engagement.

"Perhaps it will take five years, or maybe 50, but the talkies will do away with grand opera on the legitimate stage," said the titian haired singer. "It's only a matter of time before the sound picture will do away with all forms of stage entertainment," she declared.

PRINCESS IS IN BANKRUPTCY

Bonn, Prussia, March 12 (AP)—Bankruptcy proceedings were instituted today against Princess Victoria, sister of the former Kaiser.

Circles close to the princess say Subkoff since his marriage has regularly taken large sums from her.

She first divested herself of all her cash resources to meet his bills and hush scandal and then rented parts of her palace; finally, it was reported, she even began to sell the famous jewels of her grandmother, Queen Victoria of England.

According to talk in former court circles the latest escapade of Subkoff's to extort money was a threat to write a movie scenario in which his courtship and marriage and relationship to the Hohenzollerns would be depicted in an objectionable manner.

Since the marriage of Princess Victoria to Alexander Subkoff, Russian, 34 years her junior, her young husband's escapades, which ranged from excessive drinking to cafe brawling, attracted wide attention.

There are various stories as to his origin, some indicating wealthy extraction, another story saying he was the son of a cobbler, and another that he had been a Paris dance hall "gigolo."

After their marriage he was frequently arrested and was ordered out of both Germany and Belgium.

$7000 in Trunk of Man Who Starved Himself

Chicago, March 13 (AP)—Harry Kline, 61, had no money to pay his room rent. He had no money to clothe himself properly. He had little on which to eat. So he said.

In his room was found a trunk with savings account books in 35 Chicago banks. Total deposits were $7000.

Kline had been afraid to keep money for fear it would be stolen; afraid to bank it for fear the bank would fail. But with $7000 he had to do something, compromising by opening accounts in 35 banks. It was not likely all would fail.

The interest on these accounts was about 67 cents a day. On that he lived. He left his wife 15 years ago. She is coming here to get the $7000 that her husband was afraid he would lose.

STUDENTS RIOT IN MADRID

Madrid, March 12 (AP)—All the students of the University of Madrid paraded the streets in large groups protesting against measures which the government has taken expelling them without exception from the university.

The students, when passing government offices, shouted:

"Down with the government!"

"Down with Primo!"

The troubles began Saturday when the students staged a demonstration against the government, objecting to certain decrees which affected various students and professors.

WILKINS PAINTS PICTURE OF ANTARCTIC PERILS

was fought for. Every point had to be landed upon and a bitter half hour spent with freezing fingers manipulating a surveyor's transit. Hours and hours, sometimes a day's delay, was suffered because of clouds and low visibility but the satisfaction of hard-earned gain was ours.

Then came a thrilling three days sail before a storm. Only a corner of a sail was necessary. Three of us, one as lookout at the bow, one at the sail and I, at the tiller, which was fractured and threatened to give way at every moment, were swept before a gale and huge following seas for 50 hours without rest or sleep.

I returned to civilization with an awesome fear of the Antarctic. Yet I had a mind to dare again. There is something thrilling about a place where one has faced great risks.

HELD IN ICE

My next Antarctic visit, with Shackleton, was made in a ship 114 feet long. We slowly pushed our way through several thousands of miles of pack ice and at one point, for six weeks, the pack ice held us fast in its icy grip. It appeared as though we would be forever held in the arms of her majesty the queen of the Antarctic.

I journeyed south last year honing to woo the royal lady of my acquaintance. I have returned conscious of having done nothing more than rudely stumble upon her bathing, naked, in her private pool. We had carried our two Lockheed Vega monoplanes to Deception Island, at the edge of the Antarctic, on board the Hektoria Whaling Company's 15,000-ton transport ship, Hektoria, and were comfortably established with the ship as our headquarters. There we lived in a degree of comfort not excelled in a first ocean liner.

In anticipation of using snow furnaces for take-offs when the weather cleared, we changed our pontoons for skis and the machines stood in readiness about half a mile from the ship.

Dull clouds with low ceilings continued for many days and the snow was damp and sticky. Unable to do any useful work, even if we had gone into the air, we decided to avoid unnecessary risk and kept the machines on the ground.

HARD TO REACH

The weather continued warm and cloudy with short intervals of sunshine. These intervals were used to test the machines in flight and to search the neighborhood for a better landing field. From the air the land locked harbor of Deception Island could be clearly visualized.

The neighboring islands ranged higher than Deception and they were more snow covered, but the mountains rose sheer sided from the sea—they shed many glaciers, the reticulated feet of which reached out into the water making it almost impossible to approach the mountains from the sea level.

We flew for many hours about these majestic masses, and at last when the sun's slanting rays allowed the warm air currents to form engirdling clouds, we turned our monoplane and followed the shadowed coast to our temporary home.

FURTHER SOUTH

Finally we decided to move on to new discoveries. With even a light load the machine was foggy on the water, but facing a breeze we managed to rise, and once in the air the machine behaved perfectly. Then we descended.

After loading up and after much difficulty we arose again, plowing through a snow bank. We experienced a great bump as we passed a ditch. Then another and deeper one bounced the machine into the air.

The danger of futile risk was passed. If we crashed later in the day we would have at least accomplished something. For many miles our way lay over ice-strewn waters, then we came to Trinity Island, its highest peak standing more than 6000 feet above the sea.

Beyond Trinity Island we could see the cliffs and floes and bays of Graham Land. The Pacific ocean side of Graham Land is sharply indented with bays of open water. We passed Salveson Bay. Then to the table top of Graham Land. It was necessary to climb to 8200 feet to pass. We named the top the Detroit Aviation Society's plateau.

We flew almost true south and noticed that several long ice-filled fiords almost severed Graham Land near its northern end. We called these the Hektoria Fiords.

In the distance we could see the peaks of Mount Williams and Mount Francais. We then came to new territory which never before had been seen by man.

N. Y. ACCLAIMS WILKINS' POLE

New York, March 12 (INS)—Returning triumphant once again, Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins was to arrive here today from the Antarctic's frozen reaches.

Triumph is not a new experience for the noted flier, but his feat in flying far over hitherto unsighted lands in the Antarctic wastes will win for him acclaim far surpassing that which was his upon his return after the flight "over the shoulders of the world" when he hopped from America to Europe through the North Polar regions.

The Mayor's committee for the reception of distinguished guests will have charge of the welcome program. From the Battery the parade of autos will move up Broadway, with the air filled with ticker tape, to City Hall, where he will be formally received.

Those who will share his honors with Sir Hubert are Carl Ben Eielson, who also accompanied the noted explorer on the America-Europe flight, Joe E. Crosson, second pilot, and Orville H. Porter, mechanic.

Nobody Wants Job As Herrin Mayor Since Last Was Jailed

Herrin, Ill., March 15 (AP)—They sent Herrin's last Mayor to prison for two years as a liquor conspirator and now nobody seems to want the job.

The city, which obtained an undesirable reputation for lawlessness during the mob reign of "bloody Williamson" County, today faced a mayoralty primary without any candidates. There were five tickets entitled to participate, but not a name was filed on any ticket. Besides mayor, a city clerk, treasurer and four aldermen are supposed to be nominated.

RHODE ISLAND DOPE SELLER GETS YEAR IN PRISON

'SPEAKIES' QUIT: RUM TOO HIGH

New York, March 12 (AP)—The New York Herald-Tribune says today that the Jones act, increasing penalties for prohibition violations, has caused the price of liquor to soar, putting many of the smaller speakeasies out of business.

The wholesale price of whiskey, says the newspaper, has advanced as much as $40 a case and grain alcohol has doubled in price.

Deliveries to speakeasies have been curtailed to such an extent that only about one-half the liquor ordered is being delivered.

Maurice Campbell, federal prohibition administrator, declared:

"The bootleggers do not like the idea of going to jail for five years and paying a $10,000 fine. Fear of a long term has stirred the men in charge of the rings. They find it difficult to hire men who will take the blame for them. We are concentrating entirely on the source of supply. The Jones act strikes at the leaders."

Prisoner Freed by Coolidge March 2

Washington, March 12 (AP)—The Department of Justice made known today that President Coolidge had commuted on March 2, effective that date, the sentence of Albert C. Goodwin of Albany, N. Y., who was convicted of conspiracy to counterfeit government stamps.

Goodwin's health was broken, his wife ill and there was some doubt as to his guilt. He was serving a sentence of a year and a day at Leavenworth and had been fined $500, which was remitted by the presidential order.

DRESS OF O'NEILLS IN U. S. GIRLS LAUDED

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Two characteristic marks of distinction are the proud possessions of the "Typical American Girl" in the opinion of Ledyard Sargent, head of the Sargent School of Physical Education.

They are self-reliance and the enviable ability to "wear clothes," which, of course, points to her splendid physical form.

She doesn't meet her circumstances, she makes them.

It is this air of confidence, composure, poise; a nonchalant shrug of the shoulders which makes Miss America stand high and alone.

In the search for "The Typical American Girl," 17 newspapers in conjunction with The Smart Set Magazine are not overlooking a thing which might bring before them and the public the girl, who because she is representative of this country, is deservant of $5000 and national acclaim.

In response to this quest is tremendous. Hundreds of letters pour in daily with written outline and detail of hopeful aspirants.

"The Typical American Girl or rather the girl who best typifies America, is one whose physique is fine, whose carriage is admirable, whose clothes are beyond compare in this world and whose self-reliance is compelling," explained Sargent.

"By her individuality she is typical of America, which is today not developing types but individuals.

Mississippi River at 35 Feet Flood Stage

Memphis, Tenn., March 12 (AP)—The Mississippi River passed flood stage of 35 feet here today and was expected to continue to rise to a crest of 37.5 feet by the latter part of the week. Possibility of even higher water here was indicated by Meteorologist F. W. Brist, of the Weather Bureau.

Federal engineers here said the crevasse in the Little River near the Missouri state line had not been closed, but that it had been prevented from widening. The St. Francis was reported still rising at Marked Tree, Ark.

New York, March 12 (AP) The New York American says today that Mrs. Eugene O'Neill in going to Reno to obtain a divorce from the playwright is fulfilling a proviso in their marriage ceremony whereby each agreed to give the other freedom should love for another arise.

This proviso to the marriage ceremony, says the newspaper, was worded, "until love do us part,' and was to become effective whenever desired by either.

O'Neil, says the American, reminded his wife of their agreement in a letter from London in which he said:

"I love someone else deeply. There is no possible doubt of this. And th someone loves me. Of that I am as deeply certain.

"We have often promised each other that if one ever came to the other and said they loved someone else that we would understand—that we would know that love is something which cannot be denied or argued with."

Tragedy Crushes "Angel of France"

Santa Maria, Cal., March 12 (AP)—The honeymoon of Kathleen Burke McLean, war time "Angel of France," was turned into a cycle of mourning today because of the death of her husband, Col. John Reginald McLean, war veteran and Arizona mining engineer.

Col. McLean, who on March 2, was married to the former Kathleen Burke Peabody, died here from injuries suffered in an automobile accident Sunday. Mrs. McLean, whose former husband was the late Frederick F. Peabody, millionaire collar manufacturer, was slightly injured.

Spring Weather Due in Hub

On the whole, he's a fair-minded fellow—this weather man. Explanation of this statement is his forecast of spring weather as the direct result of the cold wave of the week-end past. The shivery blasts of Sunday have now drifted south to the Carolinas, says the government meteorologist, and, by way of even exchange, New England is getting warmth-laden winds from the sunny South.

Forecast for Boston: Fair and warmer tonight.

DENOUNCED AS PUBLIC MENACE

Providence, March 12—Declaring that the illicit peddling of narcotics is a "greater menace to the public than the distribution of 'hooch' and poison liquor," Superior Court Judge Charles A. Walsh today refused a plea for mercy made to him by 31-year-old Michael E. Mainelli, confessed "dope" seller.

Mainelli was sentenced to one year in state prison.

Counsel told the court the defendant was a former boys' welfare worker and had established a good reputation by his steady work with a Providence hotel orchestra.

Mainelli himself testified he embarked on his brief career as a drug pedlar in order to get money for his wife and children.

In a stern denunciation of the "dope" practice, Judge Walsh told the defendant: "The public must be protected against the horrible trade to which you lent yourself. Nothing less than a state prison term can be adequate punishment for your offense."

According to Mainelli, he bought morphine and cocaine for $19 and $21 per tin and sold them at $40. He made more than $200 in his first fortnight in the "racket," he admitted.

King Boris on Way to Seek Roman Wife

Vienna, March 12 (AP)—King Boris of Bulgaria and his sister, Princess Eudoxie, were Vienna visitors today under most unpretentious circumstances.

The young King, who, gossip has it, is en route to Rome to seek the hand and heart of Princess Giovanna, arrived last night from Sofia to take treatment for an ailing ear. Both arrived in street attire and carried shabby suitcases.

ACTRESS GIVES UP FIANCE TO HIS MOTHER

The marriage of Miss Lillian "Billie" Carr, 27-year-old actress, and William R. Sansoucy, 30-year-old son of a Biddeford, Me., undertaker, which was to have taken place tonight at the home of the bride in Auburn st., Cambridge, has been called off.

Sansoucy has returned to his home in Biddeford with his father, J. Oliver Sansoucy, who came here for him early today, and Miss Carr will return to the stage within a week or 10 days.

When seen at her home today Miss Carr said, "The whole thing is off. It is not postponed—it is over. If I ever get married it will not be in the State of Massachusetts.

"Mr. Sansoucy's father came here and told him that his mother was sick over our coming marriage. My fiance refused to go home to her.

"They say stage people are hard.

"Well, I sent him home to his mother because I wouldn't want anything to happen to her because of my actions. I told him that they were good to him and he should be kind to them now.

"I am going back to the stage within a week or 10 days."

SCOFFS AT 200 'SPEAKIES' IN CHARLESTOWN

Twenty speakeasies are violating the prohibition law in Charlestown today. This is the belief of Police Captain Michael J. Goff of that district. But as to the claim that there are 200 joints wide open in his precinct, the police official retorted expressively, "Bunk!"

While maintaining the drive to abolish all speakeasies in Charlestown today, Capt. Goff and the authorities were marking time in the case of Michael Conley, who apparently died from poison liquor, pending the official report of Medical Examiner Magrath.

The medical examiner in turn was waiting on the report of a chemist.

Woman Is Injured in Allston Crash

Mrs. Lillian Jones, 53, of Charles st., West Medway, was cut on the head and hands today when an automobile carrying the passenger crashed with another car at Commonwealth ave. and Gaffney st., Allston.

Miss Mary P. Wiggins of Amory st., Brockton, driver of the car carrying Mrs. Jones, escaped with a shaking up. The other car was operated by Philip Hussey of Warren ave., Milton. Mrs. Jones went home after being treated at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Weds Her Sister's Divorced Husband

Chicago, March 12 (AP)—Miss Mary Meeker, daughter of Arthur Meeker, vice-president of Armour & Co., was married to her elder sister's divorced husband, Ambrose C. Cramer, 2nd.

The brief ceremony at Washington was in strong contrast with the elaborate and fashionable event of 1916 when Cramer and Grace Meeker were married with 12-year-old Mary as their flower girl.

'Wet' Hooverite Sees Hero Inducted, Then Accepts Jail Term

Washington, March 12 (INS)—Though he may differ from the President on trifling matters of national policy, Morris Rosenberg, a "wet," claims to be the "original Hoover man."

Convicted twice last year of sale and possession of liquor, he appealed the cases so as to see the inauguration of his hero.

Today he astounded authorities by abandoning the appeal and going cheerfully to jail.

GIRL MAY SOLVE ROTHSTEIN AND WALSH DEATHS

New York, March 12 (AP)—A night club hostess, wise beyond her 18 years in the ways of Broadway gangsters, was under guard of a police matron today as an important witness in two slayings.

Demaris Dore, quoted as saying she witnessed the shooting of Thomas (Petty) Walsh in a Miami hotel last week, also told police she knew Arnold Rothstein, who was fatally shot in the Park Central hotel here Nov. 3. Walsh was Rothstein's bodyguard.

Police Commissioner Whalen, who took personal charge of the examination of the girl, was impressed by her story.

"She is loaded with information," he said. "She has proved a mine of information about the Walsh case. She knew Rothstein and all his associates.

He said that for her own sake he could not reveal what she had told, adding that her information coincided with what New York detectives learned in Miami. The girl told police she had been a frequenter of Lindy's restaurant and a night club known as the Silver Slipper, which Rothstein frequented. Whalen said the girl told of meeting many well-known Broadway gamblers when she went to Miami several weeks ago, some of whom are sought for questioning in the Rothstein case.

Divorced Couple In Battle of Words at Courthouse

Divorced last October, Harold LeRoy King Albro and Mrs. Lucille Yetten Albro, both of Newton, went into Middlesex Probate Court again today for a new battle—but it turned out to be a wordy one staged in the corridor instead.

Each charged the other with contempt of court. Mrs. Albro alleging failure to pay her alimony, and Albro charging she refused to let him see their two children, as decreed.

Judge Leggat assigned April 23 as the hearing date and the couple adjourned to the corridor, where the discussion took place before a crowd of spectators.

FORD-GENERAL MOTORS ROW

Berlin, March 12 (INS)—A battle has broken out in Germany between the Fords and the General Motors, according to indications today.

Newspapers report that General Motors signed a contract with the Opel Works, paying 125,000,000 marks for 80 percent of the Opel stock.

It was said that the company would concentrate upon the production of a four-horse power car selling at 1300 marks.

A report was current today that Henry Ford is coming to Europe personally to study the motor car market.

The Fords are planning a special automobile show in Berlin in the largest exhibition hall in the city.

The German Ford Company is preparing to raise its capitalization from five to 12,000,000 marks to enlarge production.

Boston's wholesale section was menaced early today by flames which raced through a building at 97-99 Pearl st., resulting in two alarms and causing a loss estimated at $20,000.

The building, a four-story stone structure, was completely swept by the fire which started on the second floor and raced through to the roof before it was checked.

While firemen were battling this blaze, another fire was discovered in a building at 40 Hartford st., occupied by the Atlantic Express Co. This was checked quickly, however, and the damage was slight.

The alarm for the Pearl st. blaze was sounded by a policeman. District Chief Goode ordered a second alarm immediately, because of the menace to other structures.

The dense smoke that surged through the building handicapped the firemen, who were forced to don masks to enter. Several firemen were temporarily affected by the smoke, but returned to duty after being revived.

In the rear of the burning structure, flames leaped across a narrow areaway and ignited shutters on another building facing on Congress st. These were checked, however, before they could spread.

Harvard Students to Serve as Middies

Washington, March 12 (INS)—Students from six of the country's great universities this summer will serve three weeks as midshipmen in Uncle Sam's navy.

The annual cruise of the naval reserve officers' training corps will be made by 475 students of Yale, Harvard, Georgia Tech, Northwestern University and the Washington and California universities. The Georgia Tech, Harvard, Northwestern and Yale groups will go to Bermuda, leaving Boston June 22 on the U. S. S. New York and U. S. S. Wyoming.

OPTOMETRISTS SEE AWARDS

Two gold medals and five fellowships for the most valuable research and educational work during the last 12 months were awarded today by the Distinguished Service Foundation of Optometry.

The presentations were made at the annual convention of the New England Council of Optometrists at Hotel Statler, more than 300 delegates attending.

Dr. Samuel W. Stratton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, after an address on the value of research, performed the conferment. Recipients of the gold medals were: Dr. Clinton R. Padelford of Fall River for his contribution entitled "Optometry's Vade Mecum," and Dr. Percival W. Weil, professor and director of the department of hygiene, College of the City of New York, and instructor in optometry courses, department of physics, Columbia University. His contribution was entitled "Physiology of Muscle Exercise."

Fellowships were awarded to Dr. Elmer E. Hotaling, New York city; Dr. Fay McFadden, Rutland, Vt., Dr. John D. Rogers, Kansas City, Kansas; Dr. Charles Poole Cleaves, Center Harbor, N. H. and Dr. W. H. Oldach, Panama.

The foundation was established by Dr. George S. Houghton of Boston, president of the American Optometric Association, to encourage research and educational work among optometrists, physiologist, physicists and illuminating engineers to discover knowledge that will benefit human vision.

THE CURIOUS QUIZZER

Do you favor a reduction in the Federal Tax on earned income?

CATHERINE DONAHUE, 20 Carmen st., Dorchester, stenographer, said:

Yes, I think that the federal tax on earned income should be reduced. In nine cases out of ten a man making a moderate salary has all he can do to support himself and his family decently. His income is eaten up by the rent, grocery and clothing bills that must be paid and when the time to pay his tax comes he finds it hard to get the necessary money together to pay it.

Catherine Donahue

ELIZABETH F. SHILLUE, 88 Marine rd., Boston, cashier, said:

It seems to me that if the federal tax was reduced the government would be giving the working man a better chance to get along in his struggle for existence. When the government taxes a man's income, at the present rates, it is imposing a burden on his shoulders that causes a lot of worry to him. I think that it is their duty to lighten this burden as much as possible.

Elizabeth F. Shillue

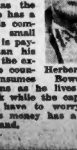
DANIEL M. GLIDDEN, 146 West st., Brockton, salesman, said:

Of course the only way that money to run the country can be obtained is by taxation but I think that there should certainly be a reduction of the tax on earned income. It is the working man who has put this country up to its present standard and the government should help him rather than hinder him in his efforts to live comfortably.

Daniel M. Glidden

HERBERT E. BOWEN, 40 Highland ave., Somerville, plumber, said:

In my opinion the man making a small salary is not getting a square deal when he is forced to pay the same tax rate on his income as the capitalist who has a fortune at his command. The small salaried man is paying more than his just share of the expenses of the country. He consumes what he earns as he lives from week to week while the capitalist who doesn't have to worry and sweat for his money has a large surplus on hand.



Herbert E. Bowen

FRANK W. SHEA, 453 E. 6th st., So. Boston, bricklayer, said:

I have heard a great deal of talk lately about how prosperous this country is. If all this talk is true, then there should certainly be a reduction in the federal taxes on earned income. According to reports this country has much money in the treasury that is not being used. Why not put it to work? There is no question in my mind that the tax rate is too large at the present time.

Frank W. Shea

ANNA M. GATELY, 153 P st., So Boston, secretary, said:

Yes, I think that the present federal tax on earned income is too large for the average working man to pay. If this country is to continue on its present high plane the workers who have put it there should not be burdened by such high taxation. Most people try to save a few dollars for a rainy day, but this is made impossible when the Government calls for its taxes. Give the hard working man a "break."

CRITICS INSPIRED BY MALICE, NOBILE DECLARES

Following one of the most remarkable trials in history, during which scores of documents and hundreds of witnesses were examined behind closed doors, the board of inquiry appointed by Premier Mussolini of Italy has adjudged Gen. Umberto Nobile responsible for the loss of the airship Italia and a portion of her crew in the Arctic. It also has condemned him for permitting himself to be the first rescued by the Swedish aviator, Lieut. Einar Lundborg.

During the trial not one word of the testimony was made public, either in condemnation of General Nobile or in his defense.

In a series of exclusive articles obtained by the Hearst newspapers, of which series this is the second, General Nobile gives for the first time his own dramatic story of the disaster and the scientific achievements of the expedition as he sees them. In effect, these articles constitute his defense. The third and fourth articles will appear tomorrow and Thursday.

By GEN. UMBERTO NOBILE

Commander of the ill-fated North Pole expedition of the Italian dirigible Italia.

IN the anxious days that followed the tragic fall of the Italia, I thought long over the cause. I made many theories. I discussed it and analyzed it to the bottom, but without arriving at any conclusion.

Nor can I say much else today. Nine months have passed since the catastrophe, and during all this time I have continued to seek, but have found nothing positive. Two facts are certain:

1—The dirigible was light, and all of a sudden it became heavy.

2—The heaviness was rapid and considerable.

The first idea that came to me was that it was an atmospheric disturbance. The dirigible had, perhaps, suddenly come into a zone of rarefied air, the existence of which could be explained by the current of cold air, noted by the meteorological office of Tromso precisely at the time of the catastrophe.

These theories, however, did not satisfy me at all, because an atmospheric disturbance so grave would probably have been accompanied by a strong movement of pitching and rolling, which did not take place. I thought that in traveling through the fog the airship might have become laden with ice above.

Without doubt such a possibility existed. During our three polar flights the phenomenon of the incrustation of ice had repeatedly occurred, often causing considerable concern. I had had occasion to verify weights of a ton and more.

The hypothesis of a heavy weight of ice can be admitted. Incrustations of ice, as I have mentioned before, were ascertained some hours before the fall. It is not to be wondered at, if, in passing through the fog, the phenomenon should be intensified to the point of causing the crash.

I must, however, state that at the moment when the fall began, I instinctively thought that a group of valves of gas had remained open. This was not impossible because, to eliminate the extra pressure noticed in the extreme compartment of the poop, I had had to open the valves of that compartment, and it might have happened that the ice forming on the seat of the valves had hindered their closing.

This is not a new phenomenon and could still occur, notwithstanding the measures taken by me to prevent it. This is why I had ordered Alessandrini to mount on the top of the dirigible.

I had also considered the hypothesis of a rip in the envelope. I pondered over this for some time.

But after an accurate examination, I ended in considering it little probable that a rip in some worn part of the envelope should have happened after only 57 hours of flight. Yet, before leaving, I had attentively and repeatedly examined the envelope in every part, and I had also had it undergo a static test without noticing anything abnormal.

There was also the possibility that the envelope might have been torn by a projectile of ice, or a splinter from the propeller, but I discarded this hypothesis as unfeasible because such a tear would have been signaled by a noise. None was heard.

Finally, using the observations, made by a member of the expedition, according to whom, during the fall an increase of gas pressure was noticed, I also made the hypothesis that this increase had provoked the opening of the valves and, therefore, caused a rapid augmentation of weight through a notable quantity of gas that would have escaped.

Without doubt this might have happened. But there is yet to be explained the cause of the increased pressure. And this can be done only by admitting that the tubes, made of material which serve to admit the neutralizing air, might have been accidentally obstructed through the formation of ice.

Today, after reflecting months and months on this subject, it seems to me that the most probable cause of the heaviness of the dirigible must be found in a combination of two phenomena: a ably during the immersion of the heavy deposit of ice formed probably simultaneously in the form of warmer damp air; and an almost coincident loss of gas in the poop, provoked by the spontaneous opening of some of the valves.

However, the disaster has been generally attributed to the rising of the tempest, from which arose the pretext for one of the most insistent and malevolent accusations, viz.:

Boy Carries Pa's Burden 5 Months—Then Kills Self

Chicago, March 12 (AP)—For five months, since his father left the family, Paul Bartesh, 14, high school freshman, had been attending classes in the daytime and running errands for a drug store at night, to help his mother buy food for himself, his two little brothers and a sister.

The night work left Paul drowsy in class and too weary for his home work. Today he tried to hire a schoolmate to do the errands so he could catch up in his studies. But his churn had other things to do. Paul came home discouraged. His mother patted him on the shoulder, told him not to mind because he was a good son and started laying out a clean shirt for him.

While she was doing it Paul walked into the pantry, took out a pistol and shot himself twice in the temple. He died at the hospital to which his mother carried him in her arms.

Thinks Ice Cause of Disaster to Dirigible

That, notwithstanding the unfavorable atmospheric conditions, I had decided to voyage to the Pole only for the desire to arrive there exactly on May 24, the day of the anniversary of Italy's entering into the World War.

Though it may seem absurd that, as head of the expedition, I could subordinate the decision of a voyage of such scientific importance as that undertaken on May 23, to a simple historical anniversary, the same it is better once and for all to show the ludicrousness of that legend.

I am sorry, in fact, to have to confess that when we set out from King's Bay towards the north of Greenland, if I knew the exact itinerary and program of the voyage we were undertaking, I did not think it at all necessary to consult the calendar.

Nor should the surprise one. In the anxiety of waiting at King's Bay, among the continued preoccupation for the safety of the dirigible, now on account of the snow, now of the wind, the days passed without my being aware of them. Only one idea tormented me. That of fulfilling the program of the expedition, which compelled me, on account of sudden fog, or of the melting of the pack if we should be compelled to descend and obliged to march on it till safety was reached.

The order given by me was very simple: Keep the dirigible and crew ready to start as soon as the atmospheric conditions should be favorable.

On this Malmgren decided basing himself on the reports and advice daily received from the Geophysic Institute of Tromso, with which I had made all the necessary arrangements.

The flight of May 23 was decided on after receipt of a wireless from the institute, which suggested leaving as soon as possible by way of Greenland, as the local meteorological conditions of the weather at King's Bay permitted. Malmgren had fully concurred in this.

Naturally, as an Italian, I was glad that a fortunate coincidence brought us the day precisely on the anniversary of our patriotic holiday. But between my being contented on account of this fortunate coincidence, and the thought that I had deliberately persisted the flight, compromising the success of the expedition for which undertaking I had brought long over worked since May, 1926, there is a great difference.

It would have been foolish and ridiculous to subordinate the decision of so dangerous a flight, to a simple historical date.

But the imagination of facile critics, of those who judge without reflection, to whom Mussolini alluded as "reminding him of those miserable shirkers in time of war, who, in the calm of safety, spoke slurringly, without the slightest shame, of the way the war was being conducted."

Unforseen "Trifle" Is Adduced in Argument

There were a number of IFS and BUTS. The catastrophe would not have happened if this or that had not been done.

This was the reason for my response both to Malmgren when on the third day after our fall, under the red tent, he asked me:

"Do you think, General, that everything would have been all right if you had followed your ideas, to direct the course toward MacKenzie river, instead of coming back to Spitsbergen?"

In fact, it was Malmgren who dissuaded me from that idea. But of what importance? The navigation might perhaps have been less stormy, but an accident might have happened just the same. Who knows if our destiny might not have been worse?

It is useless to delude one's self. One may fly for 250 hours, as the Italia did, through dangers of every kind and overcome them happily, but suddenly after there comes the instant in which a little thing, a trifle that is overlooked by our mind and senses, provokes a disaster.

A catastrophe was needed so that the civil world could see that between an aerial disaster in Italy and an aerial disaster at the Pole, the difference is this: that at the latter place death is almost certain and here it is only a possibility.

How many methods were put into action to rush to the rescue of the shipwrecked? Icebreakers, aeroplanes, whale fishing boats!

And how many countries moved to save them: Italy, Norway, Russia, Sweden, the United States, and yet, we were 100 kilometers from the north coast of Spitsbergen. We had fallen 100 kilometers further north, we would have been lost, notwithstanding the enormous efforts made to rescue us.

The possibility of a disaster and the phantasm that won't follow were both foreseen by me, and therefore did not surprise me.

So I assisted calmly, without my heart trembling at the shipwreck of the airship. I accepted with serenity the torturing vicissitudes on the pack. My heart was not broken when human cruelty assailed me unarmed returning from the pack.

URGES 60 DAYS' GRACE ON LIFE POLICIES

By OTHEMAN STEVENS

Sacremento, Cal., March 12—The late Haley Fiske would often call life insurance companies, his own in particular, "the great mother." It is an apt designation for corporations that comfort, care for and cherish those whom death leaves helpless.

It appears, however, that some companies have been over-careful of the dollar, that they have been technically right, but have been morally unjust to policy holders.

This is the reason that two bills were introduced in the Senate here which promise to begin a corrective that should become national in scope. For back of them, it is said by proponents, can be arrayed a mass of facts which would stir public resentment to a high degree of hostility.

These measures are one by Senator George W. Rochester, and one by Senator Edwin A. Mueller.

Briefly, Senator Rochester's bill extends the days of grace for payments of premiums in ratio to the length of time in which premiums have been paid. At present 30 days of grace are allowed on premium payments. Under the bill changes that to this scale:

For policies on which payments have been made for five years or less, 60 days of grace.

Policies on which premiums have been paid for more than 10 years but less than 15, 120 days of grace.

Policies on which premiums have been paid for more than 15 years, 180 days of grace are to be six months.

SEES BRITAIN DECEIVING U. S.

Washington, March 12—That Great Britain is not dealing fairly with America, and that her naval budget indicates a naval expansion program greater than anything in English history, are charges made by Chairman Britten of the House naval committee.

He said Britain apparently is determined to maintain a navy equal to the sea forces of all other nations combined. Britain's policy has been to have a navy equal to those of any two nations.

The British budget, made public in London, calls for naval expenditures of $260,000,000 this year, of which amount $48,000,000, Britten said, is for the construction of new warships, including 15 cruisers, armed with eight-inch guns. These, he said in a statement, were in addition to the eight cruisers now being built.

"With the presentation of this annual appropriation bill," he added, "it is now quite evident that all the talk by high ranking English statesmen that Great Britain was slowing up her warship building program was only bait for American Internationalists to swallow."

Britten reviewed the British cruiser tonnage and said a "careful study of these figures would show that England has abandoned her traditional policy of having a navy equal to any two on the seas, and has substituted therefore the policy of a royal fleet equal to the combined navies of the world."

'Fish and Keep Hubby Happy,' Tip to Wives

"LEARN to fry fish my way and you will positively never lose your husband," counselled Dr. Thomas Travis, bureau of commercial economics, of Washington, D. C., to the New England Woman's Club.

"In the first place, be a sportswoman and learn the joy of landing the beautiful, irridescent trout of heavenly flavor," he advised. "Women excell at tying flies and are fine fishermen. Stuff your trout with chopped mushrooms and onion, roll in cracker crumbs or cornmeal and egg and fry in deep butter like you would a doughnut.

"The man does not live," he continued earnestly, "who can be pried loose from that cook."

Thrifty New England housewives writhed at the thought of using so much butter, but received Dr. Travis' suggestion with the respect due a man who proved his statement with many glimpses of a happy married life and colored pictures of tempting trout caught in Rocky Mountain lakes.

"The secret of getting close to any wild creature," he said, "is to approach it with a slow, almost flowing movement, with no sudden move of any kind, talking to it in an imitation of its own call in a low monotone."

"If you really want to reduce, though I cannot see why any woman should, then pick out a mountain to climb," Dr. Travis continued.

LECTURE CHANGES

Attention is called to the change of date and place of the last two lectures in the parliamentary law course given by Mrs. Boyd F. Bowles under the direction of Mrs. Phillip Tirrell, eighth district director.

The lecture set for March 6 at Corinthian Hall, Melrose, will take place on March 20 in Congregational Church, Reading, at 2:30 p. m.

The lecture scheduled for April 6 in Reading will be given April 17 in Corinthian Hall, Melrose.

Special Teachers Meet

One hundred special teachers of Boston schools were the guests of the Boston City Federation when Dr. Lee S. McCollester, dean of Crane Theological School, Tufts College, lectured on "Dicken: London" at Wesleyan Hall.

Mrs. Frank G. Wrenn, education chairman and second vice-president of the City Federation, arranged the program with Miss Ada Fitts, director of special classes in the city of Boston.

Mrs. Minnie Stratton Watson, popular mezzo-contralto, sang a group of songs, accompanied by her husband, Frank G. Watson.

ASTHMA CAUSE DISCOVERED

Free Booklet Mailed on Request

Indianapolis—Those who suffer from asthma and hay fever will be gratified to learn that at last science has succeeded in discovering the basic cause of these two stubborn maladies.

This discovery disproves the old theory that asthma is the result of nasal conditions and hay fever entirely in pollen. The discovery of the real cause of these diseases has proved that these are merely aggravating factors and that the basic cause lies in the individual himself.

Fortunately for all who suffer from these diseases a cure has also been found to overcome this basic cause in the individual instead of merely treating the surface symptoms, as has been done in the past.

For full information write for important booklet on the discovery of the cause of asthma and hay fever. It will be sent free to readers of this newspaper who will write to Department 4041, Pagoda Company, 126 E. Meridian Street, Indianapolis, Ind.—adv.

Mothers Who Know Why Children Catch Cold Realize That the Youngsters' Craving for Sugar Can Be Used to Advantage

They Build Up Their Little Ones' Bodily Resistance With the Tonic That Is Rich in Carbohydrates.

Sickly children catch cold easily. Strong, robust children can stand exposure to infection and remain well. And that natural craving that youngsters have for sugar and candy is a good sign for those who know what it means.

Sugar and candy consist almost entirely of the food element known by the scientific name of carbohydrates—the bodily fuel that builds energy and that is so necessary to a growing child. That is why a reasonable amount of good, pure sweets is beneficial.

But not all carbohydrates are soluble or easily digested and assimilated. That is why mothers have to be careful in selecting sweets for the little ones. It is also the reason why so many modern mothers have found Hoff's Malt Extract to be the ideal tonic for children—because it is rich—not in the ordinary carbohydrates found in all sweet foods and starchy foods as well, but in the readily assimilated carbohydrates of maltose and in diastase.

Now careful mothers help their children to avoid catching colds and other dangerous ailments by building up their bodily resistance with Hoff's Malt Extract with Iron, mixed with milk. The iron used in Hoff's is the soluble organic kind of iron with manganese—the kind that is easily absorbed and does not cause any irregularity in the system.

Hoff's is an ideal nutrient-digestive that increases appetite and promotes digestion and has none of the distasteful qualities of fatty or oily preparations which are so apt to disturb delicate digestions.

Aside from its benefit to children grown men and women have known for years what an ideal tonic Hoff's Malt Extract with Iron is for their own use. For that extra strength that everyone needs these days—for muscle tissue, body fuel and for energy, take Hoff's every day—a wineglassful with meals and at bedtime. For adults—either plain or mixed with milk.

IMMEDIATE ENROLLMENT IN FLAG CONTEST URGED

ONLY four days remain for boys and girls to join the nation-wide patriotic Flag Contest now being conducted by the United States Flag Association.

Next Friday, is the closing date for granting authorizations to install local contest units in the various communities, and all boy and girl conestants must work through the medium of a local contest unit.

After next Friday, the closing date for receiving applications, boy and girl participants will have approximately three weeks in which to complete the preparation of their lists of answers and their accompanying essays.

So hurry along your applications to conduct local contest units. The time is growing short. Keep in mind the fact, also, the late entries are in no way penalized. You have the same opportunity as those who have previously enrolled.

Therefore, boys and girls, it is up to you to speed up the public-spirited men and women in your cities and towns and urge them to enroll immediately.

There being 18 regions, there will be 18 boys and 18 girls whose papers are entered in the national competition, which is to be held in Washington in June, each of these regional winners being taken there in order that they may personally recite their essays before the national judges.

From Washington the 36 will be taken on a trip through the historic points of interest throughout the East, with all expenses paid and with competent chaperonage. From this group there will then be selected two boy winners and two girl winners, who will be awarded a three months' cruise around the world as guests of the Flag Association.

In addition to this, the three boys and the three girls who make the first, second and third highest marks in each region—a total of 108—will be awarded scholarships, worth $200 each, for use in any college, school or institution of learning the recipients may select. There will also be hundreds of medals, certificates of honorable mention, etc., for those who make better than ordinary grades.

HOW TO FORM CONTEST UNIT OR FLAG BOARD

1. Obtain the contestants.
2. Appoint a committee to mark the papers of the contestants and determine the awards.
3. Arrange for recitation of the essays which accompany the answers to the 75 questions which are a part of the contest.

For the contestants themselves, they have only to answer 75 questions relating to the history and glory of the American Flag and the institutions for which it stands, and to write the brief accompanying essay on the subject of "Old Glory's Greatest Glory." The answers and essays go to a local committee of judges selected by the person sponsoring the local contest.

Full information on any point of the contest may be had by addressing the Flag Contest Editor of this newspaper. Reprints of the 75 official questions will also be supplied free, upon application by any interested persons.

Uncle Sam established one of his greatest business enterprises—the general post office. Like the American Flag, the post office department has expanded since that time until it is discharging its functions with a thoroughness and dispatch to be found nowhere else in the world. The American postal system is typical of the energies of the nation which has made the national ensign one of the most respected banners on earth.

MOZART TWITS MODERNISTS

By MOSES SMITH

The concert of the Chamber Orchestra of Boston, conducted by Nicolas Slonimsky, was, like its predecessors, an "occasion," attracting a fair-sized audience of unusual distinction at Jordan Hall. Mozart began the concert with three movements of his serenade in D major and ended it with "A Musical 'Joke,'" in which, while making fun of his unlettered musical contemporaries, he forecasts some of the modernist methods. A rather charming overture by the little known Karl Friedrich Abel and two Scarlatti songs, orchestrated by Paul Allen, completed the eighteenth century offerings. The songs were rendered in good voice, but without other distinction by Miss Gertrude Ehrhart.

Then came modernism with a vengeance—Colin McPhee's concerto for piano and eight wind instruments, with the composer at the piano. Arthur Bliss' "Three Conversations;" and Henry Cowell's suite for string and percussion piano and chamber orchestra. All three of these pieces were funny though only Bliss meant to be. Most of this "music" was—at any rate for me—a bore, otherwise though Mr. Cowell's adroit manipulation of tones and noises below the lid of the piano opens up an interesting field.

The audience was, for the most part, amused. Mr. Slonimsky, who conducted ably, is to be thanked for bestirring himself in the interest of a novel program.

Curtis 'Baking Out' in Florida Sunshine

Miami Beach, Fla., March 12 (AP)—Vice-President Curtis today was taking things easy at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Asker here, having come to Florida on a promise that he can rest and that the sun will be good for his rheumatism.

"I'm going to try to 'bake out' a little," said the Vice-President, who added that he does not know whether he will follow President Hoover's example and fish. He has ordered all his mail to be held in Washington.

A large committee, headed by Gertrude Shelley, has been working for weeks on arrangements. Assisting Miss Shelley are Mrs. Anna Mone, Mrs. Rebecca Fallon, Mrs. Anna Amerina, Mrs. Margaret Dooley and Mrs. Anna Hession; also Lillian Clarke, Anan Huber, Nora Mulloney, Helen and Mary Donovan, Margaret McCormack and Alice Murphy.

Indian Commissioner Resigns Under Fire

Washington, March 12 (AP)—Commissioner Charles H. Burke of the Bureau of Indian Affairs has tendered his resignation and it was indicated today that it would be accepted by the President. The commissioner has been under continuous fire by members of Congress for some time during an investigation of the administration of Indian affairs.

Burke had made charges that certain members of Congress were conspiring to oust him, but later withdrew an assertion that Senator Pine, Republican, Oklahoma, was involved.

BANDITS FLEE WITH $128,000

Madison, Wis., March 12 (INS)—More than $128,000 in negotiable securities and cash was obtained by two bandits who held up employes of the secretary of state's office here today.

Assistant Cashier Russell Pfeiffer and a messenger had just left the Capitol with week-end receipts to drive to a bank, when the bandits appeared, snatched the satchel containing the valuables and fled in a car bearing a Missouri plate.

March Is ICE Refrigerator Month

If you are planning to buy a new ice refrigerator, select it this month.

A well constructed refrigerator is a real economy. It not only saves ice-money but it preserves the delicate flavor and the freshness of choice foods.

There are certain main features to look for in buying a satisfactory refrigerator. Make sure that it is well insulated (at least 1½ inches of cork board or its equivalent)—that it can be easily kept clean—that the ice compartment is about one-third of the size of the box—that the doors have air-tight gaskets—that the latches close securely.

Doctors Plan Drive on Income Tax

The legislative committee of Massachusetts Medical Society will meet in Boston the latter part of this week or the first of next to consider action with reference to the movement for a downward revision of federal taxation on earned income which is sweeping the nation.

"This is a very important matter," said Dr. Shields Warren of Palmer Memorial Hospital, Brookline, secretary of the committee, "and I am going to call the legislative committee together within a few days to consider what action we will take. During the course of the meeting we will discuss both state and national legislative matters."

Prior to the meeting, Dr. James S. Stone, assistant to the president of Massachusetts Medical Society, will confer with Dr. Warren with relation to the discussion and proposed action.

Another leading Boston lawyer who has endorsed the movement is Peter C. Borre.

"I commend, with extreme pleasure, the movement to secure a reduction in federal taxation on earned income," said Attorney Borre. "I consider this movement to be the first step toward humanizing taxation.

"The tax burden of the lawyer, teacher, physician, architect and salaried individuals, whose earned incomes are now being levied on by the Government, should be lightened.

"The inequality of taxation at the same rate of per cent on both of these incomes is greatly shown when we bear in mind the fact that the investment income of the rich man continues throughout the entire year without possibly any effort on his part save the clipping of coupons and the depositing of dividend checks.

"I feel there is no argument which can contradict the soundness of a movement, which has for its object, the increase of the exemption age to 21 and the fixing of a more justiciable sum than that arbitrarily set by the law at the present time."

Lafayette's Kin in U. S. With Delegation

New York, March 12 (AP)—The great-great-grandson of Marquis de Lafayette, comrade in arms of George Washington, arrived today on the United States liner George Washington for his first visit to America.

He is Comte Gilbert de Pusy and he accompanied a delegation of the Association Amicale des Croix de Guerre, which anticipates organizing an American branch.

In Lenten Course

Continuing his course of Lenten sermons in the Church of St. Ignatius, Chestnut Hill, Rev. John B. Creedon, S.J., of Boston College speaks tomorrow night on "A Fundamental Principle."

Sign This and Cut Your Taxes

To the Congress of the United States:

THE undersigned respectfully urges that Congress give immediate consideration to the proposition that there be a downward revision of all taxes on earned incomes.

This is urged because in many instances earners of salaries, wages, fees or commissions for personal services have only a few years of good incomes, and prior to and after that period have substantially smaller incomes.

Their period of better earnings, which might give them a chance to accumulate some savings, is heavily taxed. Labor in general, clerical workers, salesmen, lawyers, doctors, engineers, architects, journalists, accountants, actors, musicians, singers and members of all other professions are in the same plight in the matter of earned incomes, as compared with earnings on capital.

The use of my name on a petition to Congress is hereby granted.

DISPLAY NEW REFRIGERATOR

The new model, all-steel refrigerator was publicly displayed for the first time at the annual spring sales convention of the General Electric refrigerator dealers of New England. More than 800 distributors and dealers attended a dinner and entertainment in the ballroom of the Hotel Statler bringing the annual affair to a close.

T. K. Quinn, general manager of the electric refrigeration department of General Electric Co. of Cleveland, was the principal speaker at the banquet, and in his talk, "From Wood to Steel," he gave a comprehensive outline of the trend for years from wood construction to the latest achievement, electric refrigeration.

"With a combination of the General Electric icing unit and the all-steel refrigerator," said Quinn, "together with the temperature control on the outside of the cabinet, easily accessible, the public is offered the greatest dollar value in electric refrigeration since the inception of the industry."

Barkley to Be Hub Irish Society Guest

Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky will respond to the toast, "The United States of America," at the annual dinner of the Charitable Irish Society next Monday evening in Hotel Somerset.

President Hugh A. Carney telegraphed a request to Michael MacWhite, the new Irish minister to the United States, to be present, and Senator David I. Walsh was asked to personally supplement the invitation. Members of the Irish Historical Association of New York plan to attend the dinner, if it does not interfere with any celebration in their own city.

Lane Defeats Hingham Foes

Lester M. Lane, who last fall was forced by the Hingham school committee to resign as principal of the Lincoln grammar school and junior high school, had his "last laugh" today.

Tally of ballots in the annual town election showed that Lane, running for membership in the school board, had polled 1169 votes, the most ever received by a school committee candidate in Hingham.

As a further indication of how the voters viewed Lane's removal, they elected Erwin Witterschaus, Jr., as the second member of the school committee, and thereby defeated the two members who had ousted Lane, who were Mrs. Louise Foot and Walter C. Bennet.

Fight to Administer Eddinger's Estate

New York, March 12 (AP)—A contest over the right to administer the $25,000 estate of Wallace Eddinger, actor, became known today with the filing of letters of administration by both his mother and his widow. Eddinger died in Pittsburgh last January and left no will.

In the usual course the widow would have the right to administer the estate, but Margaret Lawrence, the actress, had filed divorce proceedings just before her husband's death.

Millionaire's Wife in Pola Negri Role

"Reach for a Lucky and not for a sweet"

Fannie Ward

Fannie Ward
Famous for Her Ever-Youthful Appearance.

"'Reach for a Lucky and not for a sweet.' That's been my policy ever since Luckies started—my way of retaining the figure I need to be known as the ever-youthful Fannie Ward. So I say to you women who want to cheat time as I have done, 'Reach for a Lucky and not for a sweet.'"

FANNIE WARD

THE modern common sense way—reach for a Lucky instead of a fattening sweet. Everyone is doing it—men keep healthy and fit, women retain a trim figure. Lucky Strike, the finest tobaccos, skilfully blended, then toasted to develop a flavor which is a delightful alternative for that craving for fattening sweets.

Toasting frees Lucky Strike from impurities. 20,679 physicians recognize this when they say Luckies are less irritating than other cigarettes. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

Note: Authorities attribute the enormous increase in Cigarette smoking to the improvement in the process of Cigarette manufacture by the application of heat. It is true that during 1928, Lucky Strike Cigarettes showed a greater increase than all other Cigarettes combined. This confirms in no uncertain terms the public's confidence in the superiority of Lucky Strike.

LAWYER'S PLAN PROVIDES WAY TO REPEAL DRY LAW

Edward A. Alexander, lawyer of 170 Broadway, New York, addresses today to Governor Roosevelt at Albany, a plan submitting the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to a vote of the people.

His proposal was preceded by another letter to the Governor from United States Senator Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey, who declared the Alexander plan "not only the best, but the most advisable yet submitted of which I have any knowledge."

RIGHTS OF NATION

Atty. Alexander said in his letter to the Governor:

"I am sending under separate cover a plan submitting the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to a vote of the people. Before that piece of sumptuary legislation was forced into the constitution by the Anti-Saloon League, the people had been considered to be the sovereign power in this country.

"Now, however, two-thirds of a quorum of both house of Congress and three-fourths of the State Legislatures, through their power to amend the constitution, seem to have greater power than the people themselves.

"How may the rights of the people be restored to them? Any attempt to accomplish this result through the action of a political party will, as it has heretofore, probably result in this issue being involved with others and in diverting the attention of the voters from the fundamental wrong which has been done to them and to the states.

WAY IS TOLD

Atty. Alexander's plan is as follows:

"If the political parties do not now express the will of the majority of the people on prohibition, the people must seek another channel for the expression of their will.

"Fortunately, such a contingency was foreseen, and is provided for in the bill of rights of the United States Constitution, which expressly provides that:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress.

"Under the foregoing legal authority there should be called together two representative business men from each congressional district to serve as voluntary delegates at a national citizens convention 'peaceably to assemble and to petition' Congress to submit to the American people the repeal or modification of prohibition.

"The public proceedings of such a convention should forcefully penetrate the consciousness of Congress and convince two-thirds of a quorum of both Houses, that the American people are now entitled to the official expression of their collective opinion on this subject by means of the referendum hereinafter outlined.

"Obviously the forcefulness of the foregoing proceedings will depend to a large extent upon widespread non-partisan publicity by an independent press, having the fundamental interests of the people and the country at heart.

"At the same time that the Citizens' national convention is called, a United States senator and a member of the House of Representatives should be urged to introduce a joint resolution, similar to that heretofore introduced by Senator Edwards of New Jersey, to submit the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to the people of each State, in State conventions, to be composed of delegates elected by a majority of the people of each State, in accordance with the second method of ratification provided for in Article V of the United States Constitution. This, in effect, is a legal referendum.

TIGHTEN LAW

"While the joint resolution is pending in Congress, and the proceedings of the National Citizens' convention are in progress, there should be introduced in Congress bills to broaden the Volstead Act by (1) prohibiting the drinking of intoxicating liquors, except where physicians prescribe it in limited quantity to patients seriously ill; (2) giving federal prohibition agents broader and stronger powers of making searches for and seizures of liquor, which will authorize them for this purpose to enter the homes of the wealthy, powerful and influential, and to destroy all non-exempted intoxicating liquors; (3) forbidding the making and drinking of home brew.

"Thus the Volstead Act would vest authority in federal officials to enforce even-handed justice for all classes; including those who patronize bootleggers, the farmer, the householder and tenant who now exercise their lawful privilege of making and drinking home brew, or consuming some of their private stock, and they would then be affected by prohibition much the same as are the middle and poorer classes, such as clerks, mechanics, workmen and others.

"After the Eighteenth Amendment has been lawfully repealed, every state may be dry or wet as it sees fit. Every wet state should adopt the uniform plan based upon the Quebec system, improvements to which to meet the different conditions existing in the states might be considered at meetings of the Citizens' national convention.

Presbyterians Name Divorce Counsellors

New York, March 12 (AP)—Five "counselors of divorce" to rule on the remarriage of divorced persons have been appointed by the Presbytery of New York to replace a committee appointed for that purpose about a year ago.

Clergymen asked to perform marriage ceremonies in which either of the contracting parties is divorced will be asked to consult a counselor if in doubt about the nature of the divorce. The minister would not be obligated to accept the counselor's decision but if he did not would subject himself to the ecclesiastical authorities.

Hub Man Gets Post in French Perfume Co.

Edward W. Young, former publicity director of the Shepard Stores of Boston and subsequently advertising manager for several concerns in New York and Cleveland has been engaged on a commission of sales promotion for the Tokalon Chemical Corporation, makers of perfumes and toilet goods.

He will sail Thursday for Nice France, to remain for three months in the organization's headquarters overlooking Nice and the Mediterranean.

Meanwhile, however, he will retain a residence in Watertown.

BENEFIT FOR ELIZABETH PEABODY HOUSE LISTED TOMORROW AT THE RITZ-CARLTON—BETTY ALDEN

CAN SOCIETY BE INDUCED to change its ways, even temporarily? Will it deign to arrive at an evening frivolity some time before the midnight hour chimes on the chilly late evening air? Maids and matrons putting on the Elizabeth Peabody House benefit tomorrow evening at the Hotel Ritz-Carlton devoutly hope this magic may be worked. They provide a surpassingly brilliant concert and fashion show and desire earnestly that for once, at least, the fashionables with a decided penchant for arriving at balls and parties just as late evening merges into another day may vary that procedure.

SOCIETY OWES IT TO ITSELF to leave the rubber of bridge unplayed and the last supper club number undanced, and be in the Ritz-Carlton ballroom when Miss Jane Cowl, Miss Gilda Gray, Tom Mix and Miss Polly Walker arrive to commence as brilliant an after theater show as has been assembled in several blue moons. It is a brace of starrily magnificent stage headliners the cabaret committee has corralled. Each and every one promises to be on hand to serve sweet charity at half after ten of the clock. And indications are that each and every one will keep that promise.

THE MERRY MR. MIX, MISS GRAY of the Terpsichorean sinuosities, Miss Cowl the magnificent, and pretty Miss Walker—singly they are box office attractions to bring tears of joy to the eyes of producers. Collectively they are a magnet to draw an audience of standing room only proportions. And add to the evening's richness of entertainment a Fashion Show de luxe—creations of a chic unsurpassed from the Rotholz establishment in New York. Girls wise in the way of fashional show pose and posture will wear the beautiful, the swagger, the adorable creations.

A BOSTON HALF DOZEN SUPPLEMENTS a corps of professionals from New York. Locally it will be the Misses Gertrude Maryan, Anne Robbins, Rosamond Gardiner, Mary Young and Elizabeth Scaife who slip out of and into one delectable costume after another. Miss Gardiner has one of the tables reserved and will entertain. Miss Winifred Thorndike also appears on the list of reservations. Others are Miss Young, Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott, Mrs. George Swift, Mrs. Charles B. Blanchard, Mrs. Phineas W. Sprague and Mrs. B. H. Bristow Draper. The audience will be an brilliant as the cabaret, over which the inimitable Mr. Alpert of night club fame will exercise his nimble wit as master of ceremonies.

SALEM IS TO HAVE A CARNATION Day. An annual demonstration this, when all good citizens may buy the spicy, fragrant blossoms and fill with clinking coins boxes destined for the Salem association that sees to the prevention of tuberculosis. Mrs. James E. Sampson is headliner in arranging the day, and for her assistants there will be corps enrolled from the Witch City's important ones, for records are to be broken this spring.

MRS. CURTIS GUILD, PLAYING the hostess to Princess Obolensky at luncheon recently, was smart in her rich black fur wrap and her hat with its sweeping aigret plumes. The Princess was a stunning figure, majestic in the severest black, and keenly alert as she kept shop with the ease of an expert. Selling gowns isn't at all difficult to an expatriate Russian, when the gowns are effective creations. The friendship between Mrs. Guild, Bostonian of high degree, and the Princess, a member of the Russian nobility, dates back to the days when Mr. Guild served his country as Ambassador to the Russian Imperial Court.

MARCHING ABREAST OF THE times is the Soldiers' Shop in Boylston st. This is Art Week in Boston. So the show window of the Shop blooms gorgeously and artistically with an eye-arresting arrangement of silver and blue, gleaming by day from its own lustre and scintillant at night under electric beams. From the Shop's stock of lovely things has been culled a collection of extraordinarily attractive, hand-made pieces of pewter and fanciful embroideries and beaded pieces to ravish the connoisseur and separate him from his purse's contents.

MRS. TIMOTHEE ADAMOWSKA, ardent worker for the Shop, is enthusiastic over the display. And well may she be, and others of the Shop's personnel as well—Mesdames Edward Beals, Charles Butler, Louis Frothingham, Nathaniel Thayer, the devoted souls who carry on so faithfully the work commenced by the late Mrs. Edwards. Spring sales outside the Shop continue unflaggingly—there is one scheduled for March 14 at the Hotel Commander in Cambridge and another for the Hotel Copley-Plaza on March 29. And at the Shop all is happy expectation that sales to come will equal those past in their financial return.

BOSTON'S JUNIOR LEAGUE might take a page out of the book of the Honolulu League and stage a "movie" of fashionable life as enacted within the Upper Circles and give it a "talkie" accompaniment. Smart femininity in Uncle Sam's mid-Pacific possession were so interested in doing something novel for sweet charity they sent one of their number to the "mainland" for pointers on the newest slant in cinema-dom. Of course it was Hollywood that yielded this necessary information, and now a well known director journeys to Honolulu that the moving pictures may be professionally correct. Honolulu's Junior League should reap a pretty penny as a result.

Had Her Mother Worried But Is Her Sunny Little Self Again—Thanks to Bon-Tone

BABY CECILE POPE

To see this beautiful child now no one would think she ever felt anything but well and her mother gives all the credit for her splendid condition to Bon-Tone. Mrs. L. F. Pope of 207 Merrimack St., Manchester, N. H., says: "My little girl, Cecile, was losing weight and I became worried. Her appetite was poor and I was unable to get her to eat anything — couldn't even coax her to drink a glass of milk during the day and at mealtime she wouldn't eat. She was cross and irritable most of the time and afternoons when I would try to get her to take a nap she would cry and even at night she wouldn't sleep and I would often get up to give her hot peppermint. She was badly constipated and I was obliged to give her enemas every night as without aid her bowels wouldn't move for 2 and 3 days. Her complexion was sallow and dark circles came under her eyes. One of the district nurses advised us to give her a tonic and as my husband and myself had taken Bon-Tone with good results, decided to give it to Cecile. I have given her 3 bottles and am so happy at the way it has helped her. Her appetite is wonderful, she seems to be hungry all the time and drinks milk when I give it to her and cries for more. Her complexion is good and the circles have gone from her eyes. She sleeps wonderfully, afternoons and nights, and has gained weight and her bowels have been regulated perfectly. She is full of life and pep and is her sunny little self again and no longer cross and irritable. I am giving this statement for the benefit of mothers who are worried over their children's health so that they may know what Bon-Tone has done for our little girl."

Little Miss Pope won first prize at the beauty show at the Country fair, September 15, 1928. She is a beautiful blonde with dark eyes.

Bon-Tone is not an experiment but a definitely proven remedy, and will show conclusive results if instructions are followed carefully. Our representative will explain more about this remedy and give you a free booklet called THE ROAD TO SUCCESS.

A NOVEL COMPLETE IN SIX DAYS

by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

Six-Day Novel by a Famous Author

CHAPTER 2

DALZELL had been reading aloud to Mary while she embroidered, work of his own that he had asked her to listen to that he might be better able to judge its defects through observing her reactions. She was prompt to disclaim ability to pass on its merits as literature; but Dalzell contended that she had good taste.

"Beautiful," was the word she used when Dalzell finished.

"I hope you're right. I'm glad it strikes you that way, but — I don't know. I'm afraid."

"What are you afraid of?"

"Afraid it's over-written."

"Oh, I don't think so!" Mary exclaimed. "I don't think you ought to change one word of it, any one who can write like that ought to be able to write anything if he works hard enough."

"If I keep off the drink, you mean," Dalzell said with a short laugh. "But I am off that—for life."

"Really?" she cried with an accent of so much gladness that he glanced sharply at her, saw her lifting from her needlework a glowing face for him.

"I mean it," Dalzell quietly asserted. "It's a promise I make to you."

"To me?" She gave a confused laugh, she hardly knew why. "To yourself, you mean —it's yourself you owe it to, not to me."

"Don't you think I ought to be the best judge," Dalzell asked, with a dark smile that startled her, "of how much I owe you?"

Without waiting for an answer he left the room.

Dalzell's heart had ached over Mary Streator, and aching had learned to love.

She was for a long time profoundly troubled. Days ran into months while she thought too much about Dalzell, too earnestly.

Ever and again Pentecost's tireless buggy would overtake her trudging some lane miles from home, or the keen eyes of the country doctor would spy out the still shape of her seated in some desolate spot far off the road, lost in the maze of her perplexities.

One day he faced the minister: "You seem to be getting so far beyond the grasp of ordinary, sinful folk, Andy—I sometimes wonder if you ever stop to remember you're still

BIGGEST AIRMAIL SYSTEM FOR U. S.

HUGE ZEPPS TO EUROPE FORECAST

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, March 12—Air mail to Europe in giant dirigibles, landing fields on post-office roofs and sorting of mail in the air will be the next steps in the government's development of the biggest air mail system in the world, Representative Clyde Kelly, Republican, of Pennsylvania, predicted today.

As chairman of the House post-office sub-committee in charge of air mail legislation, Kelly has been in charge of legislation for the building of the present vast service of 22 routes covering 31,000 miles.

Legislation will be proposed in the next Congress to provide authority for letting air mail contracts to companies operating dirigibles across the Atlantic and for establishment of "aerial post-offices," he said.

"While Congress has granted authority for carrying of mail to foreign countries, the rate is not sufficient to permit profitable operation of dirigibles," said Kelly. "I have a bill pending, which will be urged in the next Congress, to permit contracts with dirigibles at $3 a pound. Some airships, such as the Graf Zeppelin, could carry ten tons of mail.

Although the air mail is now losing $9,000,000 to $12,000,000 a year, Kelly predicted that it would soon be self-sustaining. Legislation, he said, has been enacted with this in view.

Drunken Driver Hits Officer at Call Box

An automobile operated by Thomas Clarke of Alexander st., Dorchester, sprang at Patrolman Edward A. Cook at Dudley and Dearborn sts., Roxbury, today, flattening him and the signal box through which he was telephoning.

Officer Cook was taken to City Hospital in the Dudley st. station ambulance, and after being treated for slight injuries was sent home. Clarke was arrested on a charge of drunkenness. Other charges will follow.

THEY HUNT TUNNEYS IN VAIN

New York, March 12 (INS)—Mr. Gene Tunney, Esq., literateur and clubman, and his wife, the former Polly Lauder, were conspicuous by their absence when the liner France docked today.

Ship news reporters, being gullible souls, had been led to believe the cute pie was aboard.

It was learned, however, the one time champion of the world had been aboard the France, but had left in great haste at Oran, Algiers, when some innocent had inadvertently remarked that photographers still called their trade in New York. The Tunneys boarded the liner at Naples and spent three days on deck, giving pictures of themselves to children. They are to spend a few weeks in Oran as guests of M. J. Saint, resident general of Morocco. Then they may return to New York.

According to fellow-passengers Tunney confessed to gaining two pounds since his retirement from the ring.

Officials of the French line announced that when the ship tied up at Tunis among passengers decorated with the Order of the Bey of Tunis were George E. Brown, Jane Stewvall and Adele Rawson, all of Boston.

WINS $1240 TAX AFTER 18 YEARS

Southbridge, March 12 (AP)—After a fight lasting 18 years, Gedeon Gregoire, a Hamilton shoe dealer and real estate developer, has won his claim for a rebate of $1,240.12 for taxes assessed two successive years on a building that had been demolished.

Because of his large realty holdings Mr. Gregoire failed to discover the error until the third year after the building had been demolished.

He then demanded a rebate of the illegal assessment but the assessors refused to honor his request.

The same article has been in the warrant 18 years successively, but has been turned down each year.

HUB WIDOW IN GENEVA ROMANCE

Boston friends of Mrs. Olive Crosby Whitin of Boston and Whitinsville received announcements today of the coming wedding of the society widow to Maj. Gerald G. H. Abraham, who represents Great Britain as a member of the political section of the League of Nations.

Announcement of the romance was a surprise, inasmuch as it was believed that Mrs. Whitin was too much absorbed in her duties as liaison officer between American visitors and the League at the Geneva headquarters to have time for a courtship.

Mrs. Whitin had achieved considerable fame in her position, which called for not only tact in the highest degree, but a deep knowledge of the objects of the league. Ten thousand visitors from America called at the league headquarters last year. All were taken under the charge of Mrs. Whitin and through the publicity staff of the league given full information of the objects of the league's endeavors.

AUTOIST HURT AS CAR CRASHES ON BEACON ST.

Richard B. Marshall, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving F. Marshall of Hammond st., Chestnut Hill, was cut on the head and narrowly escaped serious injury today when the heavy coupe he was driving shot out of control, crashed into a stonewall and overturned on Beacon st., opposite Reservoir ave.

Young Marshall crawled unaided out of the debris, and was taken home in a taxi by his father and mother, who had learned of the accident and had hurried to his assistance.

The coupe, of an expensive make, left the road, ploughed into the stonewall and turned over, strewing broken glass about the street. The crash was heard for some distance, and in a short time a number of motorists were on hand offering assistance.

HUB MAN LEADS N. Y. DRIVE ON DEATH CHAIR

Albany, N. Y., March 12 (INS)—Opponents of capital punishment, led by Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman of Boston, appeared before the judiciary committees of the New York Legislature today seeking favorable action on the Feld-Samberg bill, which would submit the question of the abolition of the death chair to the people in a referendum.

Arthur Garfield Hays will discuss the Sacco-Vanzetti case in relation to new evidence which he will contend proves these executions to have been "mistakes."

Taxis, Buses Stage a Gasoline Tax Protest

New York, March 12 (AP)—A fleet of taxicabs and large buses loaded with taxi owners started from Times sq. this morning for Albany, where a protest will be lodged against the Fearon bill for a two cents tax on gasoline.

One bus carried a band, four others were jammed with owners, while 100 cabs were strung out in a long procession. Among the drivers was one woman, Jeannette Wing.

Before the Pilgrims Landed

When Plymouth Rock was just a rock unknown, unheralded, Jean Denys of Harfleur sailed the Rognouat across the seas to Newfoundland, the first of many hardy and forgotten men to reach the lands Jacques Cartier later claimed for France in 1534. ◇ Even great Spain requested Breton pilots in those spacious days when seamanship meant conquest. ◇ Soon the Grand Banks were full of dancing cockleshells...and still they fish two thousand miles from home. ◇ And so traditions of the sea grew greater still, till not a port around the earth but knew the steady eyes of Breton sailormen. ◇ With comrades from Provence, they man today those French Line ships whose service is their birth-right and their pride. ◇ The "France" the "Paris" and the "Ile de France", giants that form the Weekly Express Service between New York, London and Paris, take only men who graduate with honors from lesser units of that world-girdling fleet that numbers one hundred and ten. ◇ The "De Grasse" and "Rochambeau" for a leisurely cabin crossing.

COPPERS FIRST TO RALLY IN WALL ST.

By W. S. COUSINS.

New York, March 12—Recoveries in the copper, steel and specialty stocks were recorded today. A few of the specialty leaders were churned around violently without arriving at any particular place, as the bulls and bears engaged in a hand-to-hand struggle around the native posts on the floor of the big board.

Though the old radio stock stays on the list until March 22, the order of the exchange governors making the new stock a good deliverable shifted speculative interest to the new shares, which sold in good volum above 92, up 2 points.

Though the copper prices sagged the day at a lower price range, they were the first to show a sharp recovery. Large producers of copper are holding out for 20 cents a pound for July domestic shipments, and it was expected that this price would be adopted in the trade as a whole. Anaconda, which opened at 150¾, rallied quickly to 154½, and Kennecott rose over 2 points to 97¾.

The 7 per cent renewal money rate was the lowest in a month, and reflected the easier movement of money for the federal income tax payments. Some stiffening of money conditions is expected in two days, but Wall Street theorists have been able to show that money is "easing to turn the corner" in the direction of lower rates.

United States Steel recovered nearly 2 points at the opening of the market, and the stock was in demand around 182¾. Republic Iron and Steel, Crucible and Bethlehem recovered about a point on the average. Chile Copper gained a point.

New York Curb Prices for Leaders Are Steady

New York, March 12 (INS)—Curb prices were moderately today. Newmont Mining declined 2¾ to 212¼, Electric Bond & Share was up ¼ at 260¼, Federal Water up 1¾ at 54½, Hudson Bay Mining up ¾ at 20¾ and Noranda Mining down ¼ at 60¾. Aviation Corporation lost 1⅞ at 68⅛.

GIANT BANKS BATTLE FOR SUPREMACY

New York, March 12 (INS)—The Bank of America, one of Wall Street's oldest financial institutions with assets in excess of $400,000,000 today announced purchase interests to the control of one of the prominent New York banks, according to reliable reports in the financial district today.

The race for financial supremacy has been intensified by the $2,000,000,000 merger of the Guaranty Trust Company and the National Bank of Commerce. It is understood that at least three groups are seeking to annex Bank of America. The stock has risen to $200 a share since Friday of last week.

The Chase National Bank is considered the most likely to obtain the Bank of America, although the National City Bank and the Guaranty Trust Company are also reported in the field for the Giannini bank.

Merger of Bank of America with Chase National Bank, which recently took over the Mechanics and Metals National Bank, would produce an institution not much under $2,000,000,000 assets and place the National City Bank in third on the list of big financial institutions.

Control of Bank of America is vested in the Transamerica Corporation, a holding company for the A. P. Giannini interests of San Francisco.

Mr. Giannini, who is now in New York, has refused to comment on the reported purchase of his bank by New York capitalists.

SEC. MELLON IS CHAIRMAN OF 'RESERVE'

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Morning newspapers today carried this item: "Secretary Mellon does not intend to interfere with Federal Reserve board policy of seeking to control speculative credit, its was learned at the Treasury. Continuing rumors that he is not in accord with some members of the reserve board were not contingered upon, however. It was learned that Mr. Mellon does not contemplate issuance of any statement upon the credit situation."

We wonder if the author of the Washington dispatch was aware that Secretary Mellon is by virtue of his office chairman of the Federal Reserve board? It seems extremely unlikely that Secretary Mellon's opinions would be overriden by his fellow members.

Chain stores are among the leaders in the merger field this year. The trend was pronounced during 1928. In our New Years Financial Review we pointed out, on fact, and predicted it was likely to continue. Hardly a week passes without the announcement of some new chain merger, in New England or elsewhere. There is confidence in non-financial circles that a very big merger is now likely to be announced before new moons have come by. Another phase of the situation in New England is the steady expansion of chain stores both in and into these northeastern States.

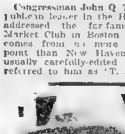
Congressman John Q. Tilson, Republican leader in the House, who addressed the Curb Exchange Investment Market Club in Boston last week, comes from a town distant a point than New Haven. Yet a usually carefully-edited newspaper referred to him as "T. J. Tilson."



JOHN Q. TILSON

With U. S. Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, Republican leader in the Senate, and Congressman Tilson, O. G. P., chief in the House, New England appears to be pretty well represented in the high places at Washington.

Headline writers "pinned up" from Congressman Tilson's remarks the idea that "tariff revision is to be limited." The final remark of the Tilson talk was that the tariff revision at the special session of Congress would include such changes as are necessary to give adequate protection to our industries. What those could be wanted by those without special axes to grind?

* * *

Congressman Willis C. Hawley, all the way from Salem, Oregon, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, pointed out numerous facts that have been mentioned in this column from time to time, but which are always sufficiently good to bear repeating.

We have mentioned the fact that the registrations of 24,750,000 automotive vehicles for 117,600,000 people in the United States testified pointedly a Washington assertion that "85 per cent of our people live in towns." What results somewhere height remark a while ago that, if we are going "over the hill to the poorhouse," at least we are going in automobiles!

* * *

Congressman Hawley declared that conditions are such in the United States that our 117,000,000 population lives better than those anywhere else in the world. Who doubts that? No foreign nation had to worry about ways to check the flood of people rushing there from New England and the rest of the United States.

* * *

"After one year's operation," says Congressman Hawley, "the present tariff caused such a revival in business that 1,832,380 workers were restored to payrolls in certain lines of industry' in which the increase was an increase of wages of $2,808,973,000; industry had increased its purchases of material for manufacture by $5,363,201,000 and the farmers' sales had increased about two billion dollars."

* * *

This was achieved, despite the fact that the New England shoe industry, as we have previously pointed out, was left without tariff protection, continuing the Underwood policy that upset the prece-vious month.

dent followed since the sitting of the first Congress.

We printed the news last week that efforts were being made to keep shares at home in some of the foreign countries. There was no hint that the action could be interpreted as "unfriendly to Americans," because, in the case of the Ford companies, it was plainly Mr. Ford's own efforts to interest foreign buyers through share ownership. The consumer ownership in this way has proven very beneficial to scores of our public utilities. The move among the public utilities originated in Cambridge. The wonder is that it has not been adopted on an even broader scale.

There was a surprise when Sir Hugo Hirst, chairman and manager of the British General Electric Co., made a formal statement that the move in the case of that company was not unfriendly to Americans. However, although 60 per cent of the stock is owned by Americans, the company's regulation has just deprived them and other foreign shareholders of voting rights, thus assuring permanent British control. The proposed new stock to British holders only brought protests from American holders.

A. h. llee's statement on insurance stocks, just issued, says: "During the past year insurance stocks have had a material drop from the high prices reached last May, and during the past few months the market has continued to sag, but we believe now is the time to make a purchase in the present market. The statements issued since the first of the year show remarkable gains in assets and splendid underwriting results. Great effort has taken place in Bank and Trust Co. stocks, and for a time has overshadowed the market in insurance stocks, but we believe an investor who is content to buy insurance stocks at present levels should realize a very handsome profit in the future."

Stiffening of margin rules by leading Stock Exchange houses, as announced in yesterday's Boston Evening American, is taken as a sign many moves that have been made in that direction. The margin situation was probably never in better shape than it is today.

Business Still Improves; Money and Stocks Alarm

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, March 12.—Business is on the upgrade. Stock prices loot ground early last week but later rallied. Many issues are the highest in years. Commodity prices have tended upwards, including a sharp rise in cotton. Banking sentiment is apprehensive because of another increase ($140,000,000) in brokers' loans, but industrial and other business leaders express confidence in the general outlook. President Hoovers inaugural address had little effect.

In the highest circles chief interest centers in the money market. An outspoken statement by Paul M. Warburg, the first vice-governor of the Federal Reserve Board and now a noted international banker, against the abnormal happenings in Wall Street has attracted serious attention. For months and months stocking has had little influence in brokers' loans, the enormous inflow of non-bank loans into Wall Street and the steadily increasing interest rates for speculation and for commercial purposes. But invariably unrestrained speculation has refused to be quoted. Mr. Warburg has courageously voiced the prevailing bank sentiment thus:

"Stock Exchange operators have now for many months governed the flow of money, not only in the United States but in the principal parts of the world. If orgies of unrestrained speculation are permitted to spread too far, the ultimate collapse is certain not only to affect the speculators themselves but also to bring about general depression involving the entire country.

"When we consider that the market value of 50 industrial stocks 20 public utility stocks and 20 railway shares has grown within two years (from January, 1927, $17,500,000 to $33,000,000,000), we find an accretion of approximate $15,500,000,000, and therefore, in the majority of cases, quite unrelated to respective increases in plant, property or earning power.

"When the savings of the masses are deposited as margins for Stock Exchange speculation, and when the extravagant use of funds for speculative purposes absorbs so much of the nation's credit supply that it threatens to cripple the country's regular business, then there does not seem to be any doubt as to the direction in which the Federal Reserve System ought to exercise its influence quickly and forcefully.

"For approximately the last six months we have had, in effect a bank rate of 7 or 8 per cent, for it is that rate which during the period has directed the flow of gold to our shores. It has also exercised a decisive influence in the fashioning of our domestic rate structure, whereby commercial paper commands 5½ per cent, and when bankers' acceptances at 4 at 5⅝ per cent, treasury certificates at 4¾ per cent and 5 per cent seem grotesquely impotent and out of line.

Never before have stock market operators been able to borrow for a period approximating one hundred banking powers. Every other last year and this to put a halt to inordinate speculative borrowing has been frustrated. Bankers' loans stand today at the highest peak ever touched except for one week at the beginning of last month. They are approximately $4,000,000,000 greater than at what they were three years ago.

Not only so, but the most unsatisfactory feature is that but $3,000,000,000 of the present total of outside the jurisdiction of the Federal Reserve banks, whereas such lend ing former times was negligible.

Last weeks rise in call rates to 12 per cent should have acted as a warning, but it didn't. The stock market actually rose after it had passed the 10 per cent mark. What may happen before the extraordinary heavy mid March accommodations and other financial settlements are effected cannot be predicted.

What can be predicted, however, is that unless speculative rates fall in the near future, the Federal Reserve Board will back up its warnings by action, including an advance in the rediscount rate.

Industries which have been prospering, notably steel motors, copper, utilities, transportation, continue to prosper, at apparently a somewhat accelerated pace. Even those industries which have not been prospering, including cotton, the rubber, coal, railway equipment, are sending in somewhat cheerful reports. Retail trade, influenced by warm weather, is very mixed. Still order and chain concerns record substantial gains in sales, mostly because of an increase in establishments.

* * *

The uprising in Mexico has been featured. Nor has the calling of a special session of Congress to consider tariff relief and limited tariff changes, affected the market although it has been closely expressed as responsible circles that Congress will exercise discretion in handling both matter.

Wall Street continues to be the chief source of apprehension.

Braves Take on Senators at St. Petersburg Today

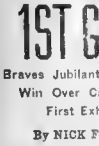
By NICK FLATLEY

Avon Park, Fla. March 12—The Braves, flushed and happy over their opening win in the orange league, were back home today to take on the Washington Senators.

The victory over the Cardinals showed that the Tribe is in a hitting mood although a bit shaky in the field.



Nick Flatley

Bill Regan Boehler and John Cassidy, who led the scrub games at St. Petersburg, explain the Judge. That's why Johnny had the whole gang do a couple of hours extra work in the pits those last two days.

"The practice was successful, for the whole team was there swinging. Lamb, Hall pitchers, who have played a couple of games, and should have had a big edge.

"Our fielding was sloppy, but that's to be expected at this stage of the game. We haven't worked anybody hard enough to hurt, and the fielding finesse will come with a little more practice.

"When you stop to consider that the Cards were our first opponents our pitching was very good. Brandt had control, which he used to lack, and Greenfield was breaking that curve around the bats like he did two years ago.

"We aren't fussy about winning these Southern games, but there's a bit of a kick in grabbing the starter, when we didn't think we were far enough advanced to beat a team that had a couple tucked away."

Bob Smith and Art Delaney will do the pitching against the Senators today. These young men are perhaps the best prepared of all the tribal flingers. Both have been consistently good in the practice bouts and should give the invaders from Tampa plenty of trouble.

The Braves looked pretty good in their initial effort, although the old fault of stalling on the bases cropped up. Three or four big innings were gummed up by slow running or tardy thinking.

The strategists will devote a lot of attention to this in the daily meetings for the rest of the week.

Young Fred Maguire of Worcester was the star of the first victory. He led the hitters with a couple of two base thumps and a single, and he performed brilliantly in the field. He is an graceful as Pavlova, and has a pair of fins that are covered with glue.

Two catches of mean flies that were being carried on the breath of a powerful breeze were quite good, while a one-hand clutch of a bad grounder was really a class.

Looks as if Freddy would make Boston fans some of that second basing that they used to know in the good old days.

The club suffered one jolt in that game, though. Al Spohrer had a finger badly split by a foul tip, and will be on the bench for a couple of weeks. The ball tore the nail almost off.

Al has been making a seat fight for one of the catching jobs, and has shown such improvement that final decision as to backstops will be held up until he gets back into action.

The going at the Avon Park diamond was heavy, and along toward the end of the frag several of the boys were limping a bit. But no ankles were twisted, and not a charley horse appeared. A little rubbing will remove the soreness.

VON PORAT AND HEENEY MEET TONIGHT

Chicago, March 12 (AP)—Otto Von Porat, Norway's ring Adonis with a pile-driving punch, tonight will attempt to blast New Zealand's "Big Rock," Tom Heeney, definitely out of the heavyweight championship picture.

The two foreign threats will meet for 10 rounds or less at the Coliseum.

Victory and a decisive one seemed paramount in each case as both fighters have been stumbling along the road that leads to the varnished finish.

For Heeney, the match was especially important and needed a triumph to offset his defeates by Gene Tunney and Jimmy Maloney in his last two starts.

Odds wavered slightly in favor of the swarthy New Zealand blacksmith.

B. U. SIX LOSES STAR GOALIE

With the return of every veteran except Sid Silberberg, diminutive goalie, assured, prospects for another winning hockey team at Boston University next winter are exceedingly bright.

The Terriers finished their most successful hockey season in the history of the sport at Boston University at the Arena last Saturday with the B. A. A. game.

The play of Bob Elliot and Hugo Nelson at the points not only featured B. U.'s defense play in the B. A. A. game, but in every other game of the past month.

In addition to Elliot and Nelson Joe Goddard, a freshman defense player, will return next season. Goddard was the biggest boy on ice the past season and proved the hardest shot on the squad.

The high scoring forward line will be on hand again next winter and also the year after that, so Coach Vaughan will not have to worry about his scoring strength for some time to come.

Dick Lombard, left wing, Buck Berglund, center, and Ralph Whitmore, right wing, worked well all winter together and in 12 games in which 39 goals were scored more than two-thirds of them were credited to these three men.

Athlete Who Broke Neck in 6-Inch Fall Is Dead

Cortland, N. Y., March 12 (AP)—Ellis Harmon, 22, broke his neck when he fell six inches while rehearsing yesterday for a demonstration at the Cortland Normal School. He died today.

Harmon, whose home is in Newport, N. Y., was senior in the physical culture department. The first vertebrae of his neck snapped when he fell a scant half foot while engaged in practice with George Butts, football captain.

Harmon was manager of the soccer and gymnastic teams and was to have participated in a physical culture demonstration at the school later this month.

Tough to Pick Best Men on Sox Squad

By JOE CASHMAN

Bradenton, Fla., March 12—Manager Bill Carrigan's biggest task this spring is not to find a good player for each position but to decide who are the best players for the various berths.

The Sox have more players of big league ability than they can keep.

The club may carry but 23 men after June 15, and at least 35 of the 42 candidates in the Sox squad look good enough to make the grade.

Intra-squadic sessions and exhibition games may shed some light on the mystery, but from present indications they will only serve to confuse. The experts are dizzy already trying to figure it out.

Those three six starters, Heving, Berry, Gaston, Connolly, Asbjornsen and Shanahan. Only three will be retained. Berry is a certainty while Shanahan needs more experience.

DIFFICULT TO CHOOSE

That leaves Heving, Gaston, Connolly and Asbjornsen to fight it out for two places. Heving and Gaston have the advantage in that they are both big league veterans but Connolly is a swell receiver and has one of those arms which you read about but seldom see while Asbjornsen is likely to break up your old ball game any time he steps up to the plate.

There are fourteen pitchers battling for nine berths. It looks now as though Lefty Shea of Boston College and Huey Harmon, a Texas sandlotter, need a bit more seasoning but nobody else can be counted out.

Morris, Ruffing, MacFayden, Russell, Gaston, Lisenbee and Bayne are pretty good bets.

The battle for the other two places lies among Bushey, Simmons, Carroll, Frey and Durham. It will be with much regret that Carrigan will let three of these five out for cash, shapes up as mighty fine prospects.

Nine of the eleven infielders are capable of holding down big time jobs, judged on what they have shown to date. Freddy Moncewicz is a little too away and Bergman hasn't reached here yet. All the others are very much in the running for jobs.

Todt and Regan are all set, but one guess is as good as another as to who will win out in the struggle among Rhyne, Narlesky, Gelbert, Reeves, Standaert, Barrett and Gerber.

SCHMELING TO BOX MALONEY IN THE HUB

Jimmy Maloney, South Boston heavyweight, undefeated since he started his comeback campaign last May, will be the first opponent of Max Schmeling, German heavyweight champion, when the latter returns to this country.

This announcement was made today and resulted from a long-distance telephone agreement between William F. Carey, vice-president of the Madison Square Garden, and Eddie Mack, local boxing promoter and matchmaker for the Boston Garden.

Schmeling had agreed to fight Jack Sharkey but returned to Germany when Mack said, plans to carry out his agreement to box when he returns. Maloney, Mack said, will be Schmeling's Boston opponent.

Meanwhile, another bout in the heavyweight elimination series was talked of—a battle between Jack Sharkey and Paolino. This affair would take place in Yankee Stadium, New York.

INDIANS WAR WITH TIGERS

Springfield Indians, present holders of the Canadian-American League championship will be fighting hard when they meet Boston Tigers in the Arena Thursday night.

They are engaged in a hectic struggle with New Haven for the third playoff position and a defeat by the Tigers would hurt their chances badly.

New Haven now leads the Indians by a point as the result of its victory over the Tigers Sunday night. The Indians will have a chance to recoup tonight when they meet Newark in Springfield.

Now the team is out to clinch first place thus assuring itself of at least second position in the Canadian-American playoff split.

MILLS STOPS RAWSON IN SIXTH

By JACK CONWAY

Big Boy Rawson, K. O.'d in six rounds by Bob Mills.

That's what the record books will say but that's only a small part of the real story.

Neither Big Boy nor Mills possess much class. They are well built, strong, lumbering fellows without skill or speed. They make up for their fistic deficiencies by a natural love of fighting.

Jack Conway

There wasn't anything fancy about their mill. They picked their socks up off the floor and threw them around. I don't care free style. They apparently figured they would be tossed out of the ring if they even attempted to guard their chins against the enemy punches.

It was advertised as a slugfest. And nobody had a right to ask for his money back. Any Better Business Man's Association would have admitted that the boys furnished what they advertised.

In the third round, Rawson had Mills down three times. On the first occasion when Mills hit the canvas, Big Boy stood over him as he was down. Nobody complained and so Referee Johnny Martin started to count. Bob lingered on the canvas for the count of nine.

Mills took another nine count a few seconds later and then a count of six.

Big Boy shot his bolt in trying for the kayo. He was dog tired in the fourth round and was belted around by Mills.

In the sixth round, Mills riddled Rawson with some more right hand uppercuts and then slammed him on the chin. Big Boy went to the canvas and a towel came flying from his corner. The towel got tangled up in the ropes and the referee counted nine when Rawson regained his feet.

Another towel bounced off Big Boy's chin and he looked very sick. A friendly towel batted the towel-throwing fan on the bonce. We'll go well to watch Jake Zeitman by of Lynn. In the 10-round semi-final, he handed a defeat to Johnny Farr of Cleveland, a seasoned campaigner.

Farmboy Farr returned to the fistic wars in a blaze of glory. He outscored Big Boy Burlap in a slugging match.

Tom McNeeley kayoed Big Boy Mack in a round.

It was a rough tough evening for the three Big Boys—Rawson, Burlap and Mack.

Maybe some of these Man Mountains would do better if called Tiny.

Schaaf Leads All Court Scorers

New York, March 12 (AP)—Columbia's defeat by Cornell in the final game of the Eastern intercollegiate basketball league season last night provided opportunities for two drastic changes in the standing of the individual scoring leaders.

Joey Schaaf of Pennsylvania already had clinched the championship with a season's league total of 116 points. Jim of Cornell strengthened his grip on second place by scoring seven points against Colgate and bringing his final total to 87.

But the chief changes were brought about by Dud Layton of Cornell and George Gregory of Columbia. Layton scored nine points to jump from fifth place to third and Gregory tallied 14 points to vault from eighth position to fourth. Colgate scored 72 points during the season and Gregory 68.

Schaaf tallied the most field goals, 44, as new Dud Layton and Carey and Gregory tied for most foul goals, 26. Lewis of Cornell committed the most personal fouls, 24.

Detroit Bowler Claims Alley Title

New York, March 12 (INS) Joe Scribner of Detroit claimed the bowling championship of the world today as the result of his victory over Mort Lindsey of Stamford, Ct., in the 60-game match concluded here last night. Scribner won all six blocks, which comprised 10 games each. Three blocks were rolled in Detroit and the others here.

At the end of the match Scribner led by 678 pins, the total score being 12,893 to 12,315. The totals for last night's block were Scribner 2,149, Lindsey 2,003.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

MR. BOSTON observed with interest a press notice from the Boston Garden which virtually admitted that its policy of adopting a $7 top for a non-championship fight was a failure, and that it intended to return to the so-called popular priced shows. The notice read as follows:

"Popular priced shows will return to the Boston Garden for the all-star fixture to be staged March 22, according to Eddie Mack. There will be 4000 seats at $1, 4000 seats at $1.50, 4000 seats at $2, 4000 seats at $3 and a few choice ringside seats at $4.40."

The press department at the Boston Garden considered this information of so great importance that it placed the question of the prices at the head of the story.

"The Garden realizes that Boston fans won't tolerate a $7 top for other than a championship fight or a heavyweight spectacle," said Mr. Boston. "The Garden folks will find they will make more money playing to the masses than to the classes.

"The Argonne A. A. proved quite successful at Braves Field last summer when operating on a 50-cent to a $3 basis. Eddie Mack used to truthfully say that 'fast halves are better than slow dollars.'

"Boston is what the boys in the racket call a $1, $2 and $3 town. The best fights have been offered at these prices. The public is willing to pay $4.40 for the best seats at the new Garden, but it won't go any higher for the ordinary run of shows.

"HUNDREDS of letters have been received at this office praising the fight of the Boston Evening American against the heavy ticket sock.

"I realize that the Garden people have not liked the idea of having their price scale attacked. After sober reflection, I expect to receive a letter signed by Sheldon H. Fairbanks, general manager of the Garden, in which he will say that his board of directors is deeply grateful to this newspaper for showing them the error of their ways.

"For after all, if the Garden had not been shown the error of its ways it would have ruined its fine business. And the type of men who are interested in the Garden wish to preserve their investment.

"The $7 ticket scale was probably due to inexperience on somebody's part. Judging from the Garden announcement, those persons in charge of affairs at the Garden will weigh the merits of a show carefully before asking for an increase in prices.

"It is well for boxing promoters to bear in mind that the average person who attends their shows is a wage earner and has to work at least an entire day for $7.

"SPORT promoters should consider their yearly business rather than a single show. Over in New York Tom McArdle slashed the prices of the Garden shows to a $5.49 top. This was a rather drastic move in New York where $22 tops have been charged for very ordinary attractions.

"Tex Rickard at first opposed McArdle's move, but he soon found that Tom had the right idea. They now call the New York Garden matchmaker "Sellout Tom McArdle." He is drawing capacity crowds week after week.

"I BELIEVE if you were to ask Eddie Mack and Sheldon Fairbanks to give you their real opinions, they would tell you that Dundee and Mello at $3.49 would have drawn more money than at $7. There is a lot in truth in Mack's old slogan about 'fast halves being better than slow dollars.'

"Anyhow, the fans are to get popular-priced shows, which is all I was interested in anyway. You may credit the change in the price scale to a victory for Public Opinion, or you can hand it to Gilda Gray if you happen to like shimmy dancing.

"THE Garden also announces that Dundee and Mello will meet again on April 12. The police goes on to say that Dundee's condition is improving rapidly and that he will be discharged from the hospital this week.

"Even when bulletins were being issued stating that there was danger of Dundee losing his arm and that he was in a fight for his life, I had an idea he would be in there boxing within a couple of months. Some persons interested financially in the match were much disturbed because I refused to accept all of their statements, but then one learns a lot of many things after being around this boxing racket for some 20 years.

"Dundee was operated upon for an infected arm. Tack Hardwick saw to it that the champion got every care. Hardwick gladly called off the Garden show rather than have Dundee risk the loss of his arm.

"It was a case of where Dundee, operated on in time, was in little danger, but he would have taken serious chances with his health if he had boxed and neglected to be operated upon.

"With all parties to the controversy well and happy, I suppose one may ask: 'What will you have?'"

HAWKS TO MAKE HUB SIX STEP

Bruins Want Win That They May Rest Up Before Vital Tilts Come

By BILL GRIMES

As the Bruins can wind up the American division race by a victory over Chicago, the Blackhawks are going to meet up with a fast brand of hockey at the Garden tonight.

The Bruins have a two-point lead on the New York Rangers and if they manipulate their ways successfully through the Hawks this evening, they will, for the second time in as many seasons, be awarded the Prince of Wales Cup.

Bill Grimes

If the Bruins win tonight they can drop the remaining two games and still win the American Division title. The league has ruled that in case of teams finishing with an equal number of points the award will be given to the club having played the least number of tie games.

Like the rest of the league, the Bruins have been through a long, tough season and they are anxious to get out from under the pressure. They will doubtless go after the Hawks from the gun and put an end to their worries as far as the American Division championship is concerned.

Another cause for the Bruins to bear down harder than usual tonight is that there are a few of the regulars who are in need of a rest before starting the playoffs.

Harry Oliver has been playing at top speed all season and he has been on the ragged edge of staleness many times. Oliver will be a new man if the Bruins win tonight and he is allowed to lay off until the first Canadien game.

HAWKS DOING WELL

The Bruins will do well not to underrate the Hawks for the Windy City outfit has been stepping along smoothly for a couple of weeks.

The Hawks were in no small measure responsible for the Maroons failing to pass the Maple Leafs out of third place of the International Division, for they stepped in and hung a 2 to 1 defeat on Eddie Gerard's prima donnas ten days ago and broke the morale of the Montreal outfit.

The Hawks, also, had something to do with removal of the Rangers from first place by the Bruins, for they held the Patrick team to a scoreless tie, which cost the Rangers a point they had figured upon winning without trouble.

CARSON AT CENTER

The Bruins will start their regular lineup with Bill Carson working at center and Harry Oliver and Perk Galbraith on the wings. Eddie Shore and Lionel Hitchman will be on the points and the classy Tiny Thompson in the goal.

Due to the fact that Mickie Mackay is still on the hospital list, George Owen will work on the front line as well as the defense. Owen has been a valuable asset to the Bruins as he has played effectively on this defense and line.

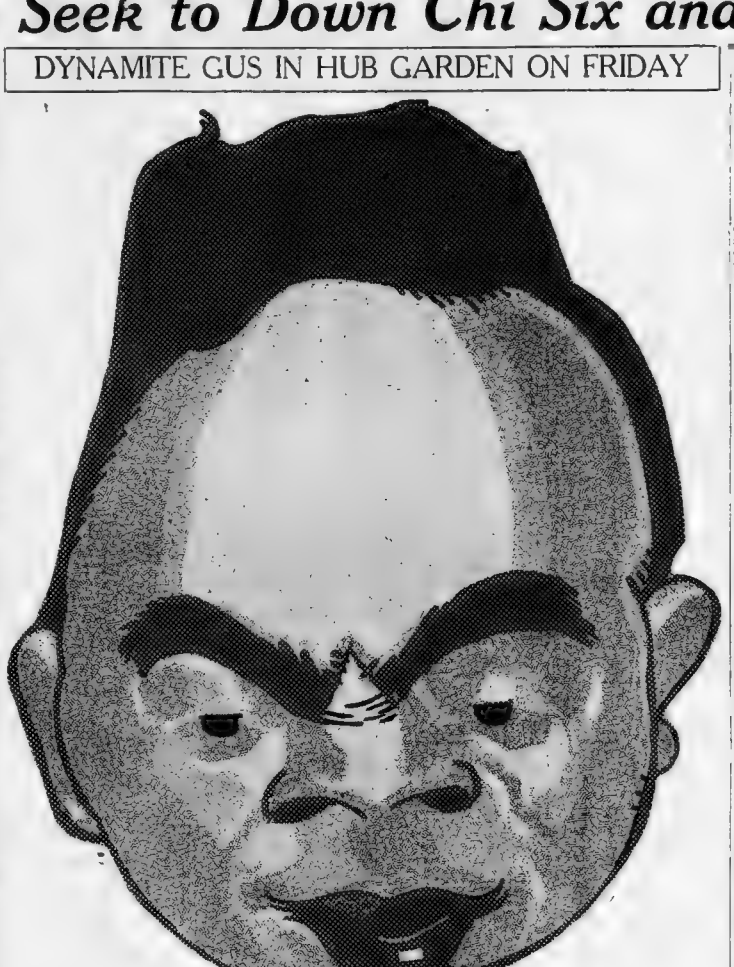
Manager Dick Irvin will start on the wing for Hawks with Vic Ripley and Johnny Gottselig and he will send Wentworth and Taylor to the outer defense and Chuck Gardiner to the cage.

Braddock Wallops Slattery in N. Y. Go

New York, March 12—James J. Braddock, the veteran New Jersey heavyweight, ended Jimmy Slattery's championship ambitions when he won on a technical knockout in the ninth round of their scheduled ten round bout at the Madison Square Garden.

The Buffalo boy showed a lot of his old-time speed in the early rounds but was pounded to a pulp in the eighth and ninth stanzas and the referee stopped the bout to prevent the Buffalo boy from sustaining possible injury.

DYNAMITE GUS IN HUB GARDEN ON FRIDAY



GUS SONNENBERG, MAT HEAVY CHAMPION

This caricature of Gus Sonnenberg, holder of the heavyweight wrestling championship of the world, was drawn by John Moynihan, art department, Boston Evening American. Gus is getting ready to meet Joe Malcewicz in the Garden on Friday night. Malcewicz is the toughest opponent Sonny has been called upon to wrestle since the ex-Dartmouth football flash won the title from Ed Lewis in Boston a few months ago.

POPULARITY OF COURT GAME DISCUSSED

A banquet of the Eastern Massachusetts basketball officials was held at Hotel Commander, Cambridge. The main topic of the evening was that of the popularity of basketball in Massachusetts.

Eaky Clark of Harvard said that basketball was not as popular in the East as in the West, and that good officiating is needed here to make the game popular.

Clark stated that many of the Eastern colleges have difficulty in getting officials to please both colleges. He said that on March 20 there will be a meeting with different colleges represented at Harvard to pick officials whose temperament fitted in with the game.

Oswald Tower, publisher of the Basketball Guide, said that he disagreed with Mr. Clark. Tower said that the main drawback to the progress of the court game in the East was the lack of suitable places in which to hold the games.

Joe McKenney of Boston College said that if basketball was reinstituted in the Boston schools it would help the situation a lot. The Hub schools have not had basketball for some years, and so have failed to develop good players.

McKenney said that there is plenty of fine material for a team at Boston College, and that when, in a few years, a new gym is constructed at the Heights, with proper facilities for games, the authorities undoubtedly would organize a regular team. There has been no five at B. C. for several years.

TAD'S TIDBITS

A NUMBER of fans have written stating that the Madison Square Garden has given them the worst of it on all big fights by letting the speculators get the best tickets.

That has happened and the New York Boxing Commission looked into cases.

Now comes the McLarnin-Miller fight on the 22nd of this month and almost every fan in New York believes it will be a sell-out.

Will the fans get an even break on this or will the specs get the ducats?

The Garden officials can attend to it if they want to.

The boxing commission can watch it if it wants to.

The fans CAN get an even break if either of these two bodies takes the matter in hand.

Of course, the specs will get SOME tickets. There is no way to stop them.

There IS a way to stop them from getting big BLOCKS OF SEATS and this way should be found out before this fight takes place. Give the public an even break—FOR A CHANGE.

It has been quite some time since they've seen a real good fighter in Australia. They've had some of our second and third raters but NONE of our first class men.

Fidel La Barba, who retired as flyweight champ, went there recently and has been winning right along and winning against the best from all parts of the map, including Willie Smith, who beat Ted Baldock.

The Australian writers comment upon La Barba's gentlemanly conduct. We could have sent a number of gentlemen fighters out in the past few years, including Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey, Tommy Loughran, Jimmy McLarnin, Leo Lomski and lots of others. Our boxers are improving both in manners and conversation.

Here is what Solar Plexus, the veteran boxing expert of the Sydney Referee, had to say of little La Barba. This is just one part of a half page story. He wrote:

"Fidel La Barba is a real star fighter. He is a quiet, modest, cultured little man out of the ring. He has the smile of the boy and the modesty of a girl. He doesn't talk, and he doesn't look fight.

"That's La Barba, as you meet him, and talk about his home town of Los Angeles, where the millionaires and the movie artists fore gather, and where the athletic club is something to make an Australian's eyes blink.

"La Barba in the ring is a pocket Hercules. 'He's swarthy, thick-armed, well-muscled, and well ribbed. When the fight begins his eye is as keen and steady as a panther's. He boxes skilfully, and fights like a tornado.

"But he mostly fights. He is crafty and punches from all angles to all angles. A very tough morsel for the man at the other end of the argument.

"Three rounds were ample for Billy McAllister, whose solar plexus rebelled against his heavy lefts that crunched into it."

MALGEWICZ TO OKAY FLYING TACKLE RULE

Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg and Joe Malcewicz, who are to clash in a two-out-of-three falls finish match at the Garden Friday night, will meet tomorrow morning with their managers, Jimmy Brown and Dr Edward B. Sullivan, and Promoter Paul Bowser on the rules which will govern their battle.

"We don't care about his flying tackle," said Dr. Sullivan, speaking for Malcewicz yesterday. "Of course, it is nothing but ramming and butting most of the time, but Joe will take care of that.

Brown, representative of Sonnenberg, had little to say.

"Wrestling isn't a parlor sport. Let each man take care of himself and the best man will win."

The meeting is to be held in Bowser's office at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, and the details will be ironed out there.

Malcewicz is also drawing big crowds to Toland's Gym. The Panther is driving through his workouts at top speed. He intends to defeat Sonnenberg on speed and skill. More often than not, speed and skill has defeated brute strength and raw courage in the past, and Malcewicz is confident that history will repeat itself.

"That trip to the tank towns Sonnenberg is planning will be cancelled after Friday night," he said after he finished his workout yesterday. "There'll be a new champion of the world.

YALE HAS EDGE IN THIRD ICE BATTLE

By TED LYNCH

Harvard's varsity hockey team crippled by the loss of the two best goalies in its regular center, puts on a last practice session at the Garden today in preparation for its third game with Yale at New Haven tomorrow night.

In this last workout the Crimson must uncover a goal tender, and also revise the entire scheme of play if it hopes to cope with the great Yale team tomorrow night.

Harvard has its back to the wall and only a miracle will save it tomorrow night. Since that Yale victory on Saturday Harvard's hockey camp has received its toughest setback of the year.

The Eli's office dictated that both Tubby Jackson and Bill Elkins, best goalies, must start their probationary period today and give up all ideas of playing hockey against Yale tomorrow night.

LOSS HURTS

The loss of these two coupled with the injury received by Elliot Pinnan, its varsity center, practically robs Harvard of any chance of defeating Yale and takes the intercollegiate hockey crown out of the reach of the Crimson.

In the workout today Stubbs must ready Hank Newell for the goal tending job for it is Newell who must defend the Crimson nets tomorrow night against the shooting barrage directed by Palmer, Luce, Curtis and Wilson of Yale.

It is tough on Newell and tougher on Coach Stubbs. No other mentor at Harvard has a probation period break into his season Football, baseball, track and crew all know at the start of the season just what men are available.

In hockey the probationary period starts this very day, just one day before Harvard's great struggle with Yale.

FIRST START FOR NEWELL

Hank Newell has never started a major hockey contest and has been sitting on the Crimson bench for the past two seasons.

Playing with a new goalie will be a tough handicap for the rest of the Harvard team, especially after Yale completely outclassed the Harvard sextet in the New Haven game on Saturday.

There is one department in which the Crimson must improve and that is its defense. The play of the Bigelow twins in both these games has been bad.

Their continual parade to the penalty box in the New Haven game forced the brunt of the defensive work on the light Crimson forwards and it is no small wonder that the Yale forward line looked superior to the Crimson flank.

This pair will hear the riot act from Coach Stubbs today and their play must be altered if the Crimson hopes to crash through tomorrow night.

Nurmi to Race Against Time

New York, March 12 (INS)—Paavo Nurmi, great Finnish runner, will race against the stop watch and not against his leading rivals at the K. of C. games here Saturday night.

The Phantom Finn, who was reinstated by the A. A. U. last Saturday, has entered the 5000 meter race and not the cross-country "Mile of the Century" featuring such distance stars as Edvin Wide, Eino Purje, Leo Lermond, Ray Conger and others.

Nurmi, refreshed by his enforced rest, believes he will shatter the records set by Willio Ritola for three miles, four miles and 5000 meters. No stars are entered against him.

Parker Defeats Colombo in Lynn Go

Charlie Parker of Boston defeated Cap Colombo of the U. S. Navy in the 10-round main bout for the Crescent A. C. at Casino Hall in Lynn.

Novice Driver Will Try for New Record

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 12 (AP)—A comparative novice at high speed automobile driving today awaited the receding tide along the ocean beach race course for an attempt to bring back to America the straightaway mile racing record set by Maj. H. O. D. Segrave of England yesterday at 231.36246 miles per hour.

Before taking the wheel of the 36-cylinder triplex, owned by J. M. White of Philadelphia, however, Lee Bible, little known local mechanic, was ready to undergo tests by the American Automobile Association to determine his capability of driving the former title-holding car at high speed.

Otherwise, any mark he might set would not be recognized as official by the national racing body.

Segrave, who startled the automotive world at the burning pace he set in his trim streamline speed creation yesterday, still was not satisfied with his mark.

He said last night he believed his "Golden Arrow" could attain a maximum speed of 240 miles per hour and indicated he wanted another chance to "open her up."

Never before was technical arrangement so perfected for a speed trial. Not only was the mechanical perfection of the machine taken into consideration, but the weather, tide, beach condition and even targets at which the car was aimed by its drivers all had a place in the arrangements which made the record-breaking run possible.

White hoped that it would be a record for but a day, his triplex, a powerful creation of 1500 horsepower, but with little thought at stream lining, was ready.

It remained for the A. A. A. officials to sanction Bible as its driver, and today, some time shortly after 3 o'clock, White expected to bring back the record to America.

With ideal weather and beach conditions, White said his car could make a maximum speed of 270 miles an hour.

There were numerous opinions expressed here today regarding the possibility of White breaking the record with his triplex. White, of course, was confident.

Ray Keech, who drove the car last year to its 207 miles an hour record, was certain it could never develop more than 220 miles an hour at best, since it is not a stream lined vehicle.

Bible, who has never driven racing cars except in track exhibitions, was certain the triplex could do the track and equally certain that he could drive it at that rate. In any event he was willing to stake his life on it.

The general feeling in Daytona Beach, however, appeared to be that "the record that will stand a while was set yesterday."

Red Sox Rumbles

Bradenton, Fla., March 12—President Bob Quinn arrived this morning.

He is most optimistic over the chances of his hired men this season.

Word was received today from John Shreno Collins, former White Sox and Red star, who is now managing the Pittafield club in the Eastern League, that he will arrive in camp on Thursday.

Collins will get several of the Sox rookies. So will Duffy Lewis, manager of the Portland, Me., club in the New England League, who has been down here since Friday looking the boys over.

Big Ed Carroll, the tallest and best looking athlete on the squad, showed a lot of stuff during the two innings he toiled in the practice game. He displayed a fine fast ball and very good change of pace.

Big Ed Morris' fast one was entirely too much for the enemy hitters, who haven't got their batting eye as yet.

OLEOMARGARINE is a substitute for butter. However, when it is properly manufactured from materials which are wholesome and clean, it is a perfectly harmless article and possesses about the same nutritive value as butter itself.

Martha Lee Tells of Holiday Plans

WHAT shall our St. Patrick's Day celebration be this year? A dinner with green and white carnations nodding at the green glass and service plates, and the little green shamrock place cards twinkling back at them? To be sure!

There must be something to start the party off as St. Patrick would have it—with laughter. So have all your guests write a last line to the following limerick, and you'll learn some new things about prohibition!

A wonderful saint was St. Pat.

PIGS-IN-THE-BLANKET CANAPE

Clean oysters, or use canned oysters, and wrap each in a thin slice of bacon. Fasten with wooden toothpicks. Put in a broiler, place broiler over dripping pan and bake in a hot oven until the bacon is crisp and brown, turning the broiler once during the cooking. Place one pig-in-the-blanket on a triangle of toast for an individual serving and sprinkle with chopped parsley. Serve very hot.

OKRA AU GRATIN

Cut the contents of a No. 2 can of okra in thin slices. Make a cheese sauce by melting 3 tbsps. butter, blending with 3 tbsps. flour and ½ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper and adding 1½ c. milk gradually. Cook until smooth and thick, stirring constantly. Then add ¾ c. grated cheese and stir until melted. Combine with the okra and pour into individual buttered ramekins or custard cups. Cover with buttered bread crumbs and brown in a hot oven.

PINEAPPLE AND AVOCADO SALAD

Cut 6 slices of canned Hawaiian pineapple in halves. Pare an avocado, cut in lengthwise halves, remove stone and cut in slices, crosswise, into crescent shapes. Arrange on bed of romaine, alternating pineapple and avocado. Serve with a lime dressing made by substituting lime juice for lemon juice in a standard French dressing.

PISTACHIO ICE CREAM IN SPONGE CAKE BASKETS

Cut oblong pieces of sponge cake, then scoop out the centers, forming baskets or boxes. Fill with pistachio ice cream and tie a piece of green ribbon around the box, with a bow at one side. Or wind ribbon around a curved wire and insert the ends into the cake in such a way that a handle is formed.

The yellow plague is very much with us at the moment. The use of yellow, tan, light yellow, honey and yellow-brown is becoming more and more pronounced, and its smartest advocates see to it that these shades are paramount where their lingerie is concerned. At times salmon pink seems also to be very much present, you may be sure that it is heavily trimmed with ecru lace.

"Strongarm Ike" Saves a Romance

SONIA climbed the three flights of stairs to the three rooms on the top floor that she called home. The place seemed like a bit of heaven after 10 hours in the novelty factory. With a sigh she took off her things, spread the delicatessen purchases on the table in the large room, made her cup of tea and sat down to eat.

Sonia wondered as she nibbled at a cookie, which was her dessert, where her father was tonight—every night. Out with "Strongarm" gang again, probably. She wondered why she could not have had a father like other fathers—a father who had regular hours, a job, worked like other men.

She glanced at the closed door of his room. Of course, he would come in tonight, as usual, long after she was asleep.

Then her thoughts turned to Jim. This was Jim's night off. He would be here soon. He had phoned her. Sonia clasped her hands tightly. She wanted Jim to come. She had adored him ever since the night he rescued her from that gang on the nearby docks—ever since he had beaten off five of them with his nightstick and just escaped a fractured skull as he dodged a pair of blackjacks.

But she was afraid of what Jim might say to her tonight.

She would love to hear him say it. It would be the one brief spot of romance in her drab life. And yet she must not let him say it. She must ward him off. She told herself that she had no right to let Jim come to see her. If she had a different father, it would be different.

Sonia had just wiped the last dish when there was a knock at the door.

She flushed with delight as she opened it. "Hello," said Jim and strode in smiling, six feet of strapping young American in civilian clothes that became him as well as his blue uniform.

Sonia seated him in the faded Morris chair and took another at the opposite side of the table. She pretended to busy herself with a little basket of fancy work. Jim lighted a cigarette and watched her.

Suddenly he arose and came around to her. "Sonia," he began, "what's the use of my stalling. I can't sleep nights for thinkin' of you. I'm goin' hook, line and sinker. You're the only girl, Sonia—will you marry me?"

Sonia sprang to her feet, the basket falling to the floor, scattering the bright threads and ribbons. Her hand went to her heart and her color faded. The expression in her eyes was pitiful.

"Don't—Jim," she said tragically. "If things were not what they are—that is, I mean, you shouldn't be asking me. You—a good cop—on the way to promotion—wanting to marry the daughter of a man they call 'Strongarm Ike!' You don't know what you're saying, Jim. Please don't."

"I'm not marrying your father," declared Jim doggedly.

"You would be," persisted Sonia desperately. "Anybody that marries a girl marries her whole family—some ways—don't forget that. You'd never hear the end of it—be sneered at—lose your job, probably —I'd be to blame for letting you—make a fool of yourself."

"Don't you love me, Sonia?"

"It's got everything to do with it. You're a fine, sweet girl you can't help it if your father is—" Jim halted lamely.

"Say it, Jim—say it! Maybe it'll help you to come to your senses. I can't help it—if—my—father—is—a—crook!"

"Aw, Sonia, I didn't want to say that—you know I didn't. I want you in spite of anything. I'll take the chance, Sonia, and be glad to. It'll be up to me. I'll make you happy."

"No," exclaimed Sonia, "you'll take no chances with me. I won't marry anybody—under the circumstances." She sat down hopelessly, burying her face in her hands.

Jim put a loving hand on her shoulder. He was about to utter words of devotion and comfort when—

A door swung open. In it stood Ike—blinking a bit as he looked from the dark bedroom into the lighted one.

"Say," Ike began insolently, "I heard what you said, see? Didn't think I was in there, did yuh? Well, that dose of bootleg sent me home this afternoon—to take a nap.

"So, I'm no good, am I? My daughter's 'ashamed of me an' fly cops comes under my own roof knockin' me! If I'd done right I'd sneaked out here an' give you the works. But I ain't feelin' so good —guess I'm gittin' to be a has-been.

Sonia took a step toward him, loyalty springing up in her heart. "I'll stick by you, dad," she cried passionately. "I—I wish you was different—but you're my dad and I'm standing by you. Didn't you hear me say I wouldn't"—

With a wave of his hand Ike stopped her. "You wouldn't—git married," he interrupted, "because I'm not the right kind of a guy—yep—I heard you, all right."

He rubbed his chin thoughtfully. "Who knows?" he asked bitterly. "Maybe you're right. But," he added, as he straightened up with sudden resolution, "I'm doin' it Fade-out. I'm tired of the game, anyway. If I had my life to live over, I wouldn't do it as well, let that pass. I'm doin' the grand getaway—and—no flowers, see?"

"Where does the light go when you blow it out?" asked Ike with a grim smile. "You don't need to know, Sonia. You gotta job. Why worry?"

He slammed out of the door.

Ike was a block ahead of them when they reached the street, making eastward, straight for the pier. "He's crazy, Jim—the bootleg's made him crazy." Sonia whimpered as they increased their pace.

Ike paused only an instant on the string-piece, flung his cap in the air as a final gesture of farewell, and made a clean dive into the river.

Jim reached the end of the dock just too late. He leaned over, peering into the lapping black water, now slashed here and there by lights from the shore. Rising, he started to take off his coat.

Sonia stopped him, sobbing. "See anything of him?" she asked fearfully. Jim shook his head. "Then don't risk it," she begged. "the tide would only carry you out and that would make two." Jim continued to strain his eyes, peering out over the near surface of the river. But he saw nothing of Ike.

Mate Jansen, leaning over the rail of the rusty tramp steamship, heard something splashing alongside. He leaned further. "Ship, ahoy," shouted a weak voice. "Hey, buddy, throw a guy a rope, can't you?"

Jansen did so and, with the aid of a couple of the crew, pulled the man from the river, shivering. Jansen was glad, for they were short-handed and ready to sail. After the rescued man had been put in dry clothes, Jansen started to question him.

"Cut out the third degree," exclaimed Ike. "Call me Yen Yensen, or anything you like, see. I fell off a dock an' the tide carried me down here. How about a job—got one loose on this scow?"

As the tramp pulled out at high tide, Ike stood on deck, taking a farewell look at the darkened monoliths of the city he was leaving—perhaps forever, he thought. For a moment the hard lines of his face seemed to fade out.

"Well, good-bye, kid—good-bye—Sonia," he muttered as the water front lights began to recede. "You won't have to look father to stand in your way now. And, if I ever do come back, kid, I'll come back—straight."

What Will you do

When your Children Cry for It.

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family, there's almost daily need of its comforts. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved—or diarrhoea checked. A vegetable product, a baby remedy meant for the young folks, Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless they may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that baby becomes fretful, or restless. Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every druggist has it.

Points on Mental Tests Given by Dr. Bisch

Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

IF you have a child examined by a mental test or if, indeed, you undergo such an examination yourself, be sure, for one thing, that the person performing the test is one qualified to do the work.

For the interpretation of any mental test whether it be to determine backwardness, precocity, vocational fitness or whatnot—is even more important than the mere giving of the test. For this reason, only such tasks persons trained in psychology are necessary.

The tests used should also be "standardized" tests.

That is, they should be tests which have been tried out on a few thousand individuals at least. Otherwise it is impossible to tell what the average or normal response to the test really is.

There are hundreds of tests in use but not all are standardized.

To standardize a test takes a long time, for so many, many individuals must be examined. The truth of the matter is that it is easier for a psychologist to invent a new test than to standardize an old one. That is why we have so many tests nowadays that cannot claim strict scientific worth.

It is best, also that so-called "Form Board" tests be employed in addition to the ordinary tests which involve the use of language. Particularly is this true when accurate data as to the results of the ordinary tests.

A form board test is usually of the type where it is necessary to fit irregularly shaped pieces of wood into a frame.

On these no language is employed except in giving directions, and even directions may be avoided, the subject being instructed through pantomime what is required of the individual.

These tests of manual manipulation are very valuable in testing foreigners, the deaf and dumb, etc. They have proved very valuable in testing immigrants at Ellis Island, in the port of New York.

I want to repeat again the importance of the interpretation of tests.

A history of the subject should invariably be taken.

Such information as when he walked, talked, cut the first tooth, etc., infantile diseases, convulsions, etc., throws a flood of light on a child's inherent powers of development.

Hereditary factors may likewise be important. The conditions of the mothers before and at birth should receive due consideration.

Then the environment of child or the adult, as the case may be, may have a lot to do with his mental capability and output. For instance, an otherwise normal child, but undernourished, or suffering from adenoids, may do poorly on a mental test.

Mental tests are a wonderful aid to our understanding of the human mind, but they must be employed with scientific knowledge and a measure of common sense.

As a general rule it is a good thing to have as many tests as possible made on an individual. This gives an approach to his mind from various angles.

The RETURN OF OLD KING BRADY

The Adventures of Great Detective Recounted

CHAPTER TWO

Alice, Harry and Mr. Anderson are to meet Ah Sam's agent at a house on Pell st. They are tricked by Sophia. Mr. Jenkins calls on Old King Brady for help to recover the idol. The old detective writes an advertisement.

JUST as Harry and Alice were ready to depart for Chinatown, one of the secret service men was announced. He walked into the library and looked at Alice inquiringly after he had exchanged greetings with the Bradys. "Miss Montgomery, I really must congratulate you on your makeup. It is wonderful."

"Oh, it is like everything else, practice makes perfect," replied Alice calmly.

"How did the scheme work out, Mr. Brady?"

"All right. I saw the woman ride away with a Chinaman. I renewed my acquaintance with Jenkins and he seemed to be terribly worried for fear his daughter had eloped."

"Ah!" said the commissioner. "I am told Miss Jenkins had a parcel with her. Do you happen to know what was in it?"

"No. All I know is that it had been passed by the customs inspector."

"That parcel contained a wooden idol. We suspect that it contained diamonds, but the inspectors could find no trace of them. Did Jenkins say anything to you about the idol?"

"Just that it had been given to him by an old friend," replied the old detective.

"Are we going now?" asked Alice, who was impatient to be off.

"Yes, I thought we might as well all go together. I can take you as far as Chatham sq. in my car."

"How much confidence do you place in Ah Sam, Mr. Anderson?" asked Old King Brady shrewdly.

"I don't know him, but he is directly connected with headquarters, and they must take a lot of stock in him to send him to Europe in this matter."

"There is such a thing as helping too close," said Old King Brady. "We ought to know something about the man."

Mr. Anderson departed in company with Alice and Harry. The run to Chinatown was quickly made.

Alice was to meet an agent of Ah Sam's at the door of the Pell street house, and be conducted into Sophia's presence. Harry and Mr. Anderson were to wait in an adjoining room where they could overhear all that passed.

The rescue having been performed, Alice was to conduct the woman to the automobile and there deal with her, in accordance with what she revealed.

A fat, stupid looking Chinaman was standing at the side door of the building. Alice spoke to him in Chinese, giving him the password "Evidently he did not understand English.

"Shall we move, Mr. Anderson?" asked Alice.

"Yes, let us push right ahead. We are bound to get it through."

The Chinaman led the way up two flights of stairs and opened the door of a vacant room, speaking to Alice as he did so.

"He says you two are to wait here," she said.

Harry and Mr. Anderson entered.

The Chinaman unlocked another door. "You better go in alone," he whispered to Alice. "It is quite dark, probably she is asleep."

Alice pushed open the door. The room was cheaply furnished. On the bed lay something covered with a sheet. Alice turned down the sheet and found herself looking at a bunch of pillows. There was no one on the bed, and she was alone in the room.

She made for the door. It was locked. She heard a chuckle and someone ran downstairs. She tried the dividing door between the two rooms. It was unlocked, and Harry and Mr. Anderson was waiting there.

"What's the matter?" demanded the commissioner.

"We've been tricked, that's all," replied Alice. "There's nobody there."

"I half expected it," replied Mr. Anderson. "Well, what about that door, Harry?"

"Locked. However, I can probably open it with my skeleton keys." He did so without difficulty.

There was no one in the hall.

In the other room, meanwhile Alice had found a letter addressed to Mr. Anderson. It was written in a woman's hand and signed "Sophia Sam."

"My dear Mr. Commissioner," it began. "I hope you may not be too badly disappointed. Ah Sam and I fully understand each other and bid you adieu. Kindly forward my husband's resignation to the secret service bureau at Washington, and tell them the next time they put up a job on a woman they may meet with a similar experience.

"Why should we quarrel?" Dalzell with a sullen grimace returned. "I haven't even seen him since this afternoon. Isn't he in his study?"

"No. He went out just after supper. Tom, why are you trying to deceive me? Do you think it's fair?"

"Fair?" He gave a laugh curt and pitiless. "It's silly, it's hopeless—any lie is, between you and me."

She understood him at last. He knew by the catch in her breathing, the dilation and darkening of the eyes in her whitened face.

"I'm going away," he harshly informed her—"tonight, for good—and, forever—"

"Oh, no!" she cried, as if the bare suggestion frightened her—"you can't, you mustn't—not yet —"

"I'm going," he repeated—"I must. Because I love you."

"Oh, no!" she feebly pleaded—"no—"

"I love you. I've tried the best I know how not to show it, but it's no use, it—it's too much—more than any man could stand. I've got to tell you, and can't—I love you much more than I know how to tell you."

"You don't need to," she gently answered.

Dalzell cried as if he groaned: "You care?"

"Too much," she uttered in a breath, "to let you go like this."

His impetuous arms she forbade with the least lift of one hand, with a slight negative movement of her head. And yet—"You love me?" he declared more than asked.

"Oh!" she cried, and caught herself. Too late she saw how she had misled him. "Please," she begged. "don't make me answer that. You have no right—"

"If I have your love I have every right—"

"Not here!" she reminded him with a firmness whose cruelty she felt as well—"not as my husband's guest and friend—"

"Your husband!" The man was savage in his pain. "Don't make me think of him."

He blundered away across the Barrens. He felt as if his heart were bursting. His self-imposed "renunciation" melancholy grew theatrical, tossed dramatic hands to the desolation that haunted night, and sobbed aloud: "Sad . . . sad . . . dear God, how sad!"

Was it fiction of a disordered fancy that the night gave back an echo? Dalzell's violent start, the fearful glances that surveyed the setting of his plight, were unaffected.

He shivered and forgot his terrors in a new welling of pity for himself. "God in Heaven!" he raved, again aloud, wringing his hands, lifting his writhen face to the blind sky—"what am I doing here? She loves me, as I love her, better than life—and I'm leaving her to the living death of her life with him. God!" he appealed from the rack of his infinity of grasp and purpose—"why do

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

IT hardly seems fair that the Daughters of the Dusk have been so sadly neglected in favor of their fairer Sisters of the Morning. But it seems to have been so lately. However, here's my bid to bring them to the fore again.

What lovelier sight in all the world than a sloe-eyed, dusky-haired maiden? Stately, lovely, queenly or, perhaps, petite, piquant and pert. Any way you find her, though she's the Ⓓ embodiment of nerve and dash and loveliness.

Take the daughters of Sunny Spain or of Fair Italy or of the colder climes of Russia. They have stood for centuries as the outstanding examples of Beauty. And they well deserve the title.

Full of fire, flashing eyes, ruby lips, hair like the raven's wing and a smile that simply dazzles. It's not fair to relegate them and bring the blonde loveliness of her sisters so prominently to the front ranks.

So here's my toast—to the Daughters of the Dusk! Kissed with star dust, sprinkled with moonbeams, the embodiment of all the mystery of the night; may she ever find the Love for which she is destined and the happiness which is her heritage!

Woman Sleuth Plays Big Part in the Story

You don't get the diamonds, you don't get my husband, who suits me all right, and you don't get yours truly, Sophia Sam."

"Come on," said Mr. Anderson, "let a ring off and go home."

Old King Brady laughed heartily when he heard the story. "Mr. Ah Sam evidently saw his chance to pick up an heiress and he promptly embraced it. I dare say they are off the coast by now and probable the idol was stuffed with diamonds which the inspectors failed to find. So tonight the trail was ended But next day come orders to follow up to a finish.

"We want that idol and we want it bad," said the chief over the wire.

"You get it if it is to be had," replied Old King Brady.

He had orders to arrest the couple and hold them both. Old King Brady did not fancy it, but it had to be done.

That evening, while the Bradys were playing a game of pinochle Mr. Jenkins was announced. One glance at his face was sufficient to show that he was a man who had been greatly disturbed. He tossed a letter on the table and dropped wearily into a vacant chair. The letter ran as follows:

"Dear Pa—Here I am, true to my hand I shall be married to Mr. Sam. The fact is we were married in Hamburg and didn't tell you for I knew Sam promise to keep away until I had seen you safely through this trip. As I thought it doubtful you would give me a dowry, I took the liberty of swiping the wooden idol.

"So long, pa! Be good! By the way, Sam says to tell you he has resigned from the Secret Service, so you won't have to bother any more.

Yours in hopes,

"Sophy."

"Cool!" said Old King Brady. "I should say so," replied Mr Jenkins. "Can't we get you alone a minute, Mr. Brady?" Harry immediately left the room, but it was only to go into the little room at the end of the hall, where a cleverly contrived listening panel made every word clear that was spoken in the library.

"Will you try to find my girl, Mr. Brady?"

"On one condition only—that you fully explain that letter. The last paragraph needs explanation."

Mr. Jenkins looked bothered. Now, look here, will you swear not to betray anything I may tell you?"

"Yes, I swear that." And the old detective meant it. He saw that Jenkins did not suspect him of being with the Secret Service, and here was a chance to solve the old mystery—how Jenkins did his smuggling.

Mr. Jenkins leaned forward and spoke quickly. "I never want to see my daughter or her Chink again—what I want is the wooden idol. They'll never get a cent of my money. It will go to charity—all of it." He had worked himself into a rage. It seemed useless to Old King Brady to press him further just now for the opportunity to use him as an aid to carrying out his plans was too good to be overlooked.

So Old King Brady let him go. Harry returned to the library.

"Well, it seems clear that Jenkins knows something about that idol of which neither Ah Sam nor Mrs. Sam have any inkling. We have to assume that it is diamonds. I've got a scheme. Call up and see if Alice is in and fetch her down," said Old King Brady.

"Now, Alice," he said a few minutes later, "write what I tell you in the form of a Chinese advertisement for their bulletin board." She accordingly got out a package of red paper slips and a Chinese pen and a stick of their peculiar ink. Then with the reed pen she quickly wrote the following:

"Ah Sam. You may think you know all the secrets of the wooden idol, but you are mistaken. You don't know the real secret. I do. It is for sale cheap. Address M. M. General Delivery, Malden sq. Appointment. Your wife's photograph must accompany the letter so I may know it is the right party. If I don't hear within a week the information goes to the Secret Service."

"Now," said Old King Brady, "you and Harry get down to Chinatown and post that notice. I am going to bed."

"Shall I make up Chinese?" asked Alice.

"Might as well," replied Harry. "Something may turn up."

living in a world of flesh and blood.'"

The derisive look was slightly more pronounced. "The vineyard of my labors, Hugh—do you think I'm likely to forget it?"

"Then, I take it, you haven't altogether forgotten you've got a wife."

"What makes you say that?"

"Merely to remind you she's a woman and, if I'm not mistaken, not less than twenty-seven."

"Why are you interested?"

"When a woman like Mary—all of her womanly gifts that kicked and hasn't had a baby, nature's being thwarted; and that's bad business. Mother Nature is long-suffering but a shrew when she's flouted—she has her own ways of requiting such insolence."

Streator flung up a commanding hand. "Wait, Hugh," he warned—"these matters 'twixt wife and God—"

"That cant be blowed! You know better—your own religion tells you the God it worships gave Mary to you to be your wife, the mother of your children. Knock me down if you don't see the truth from a friend's lips once in a way—but hear me out first: If you still love Mary, if you don't want to lose her, don't rob her of motherhood."

The steel-gray eyes did not waver from the glare in Streator's till it began to flicker and be clouded. Then, as the threatening hand in the room fell, Streator's stood with no other farewell, marched off.

"It's a lie! I've never breathed a word of love—"

"Of course you haven't; you know she wouldn't listen. But neither have you ever thought her half-witted, I take it. Or do you flatter yourself you're so smart you can live under one roof with the woman you love for months and keep her in ignorance of the way you feel about her?

"Can't you understand what a drain on her it must be to be all the time reminded of your necessity and her inability to help you? If you love her as you say, lift that stain from her, get out of her sight and stay out of it, get out of her life and let her forget you—let her forget you ever came into it. Give her the fair chance she deserves to make her life what it ought to be."

Dalzell was in an agony of indecision, at last he said: "As soon as I can in decency . . ."

"Tonight, then."

Dalzell threw him a look at once mutinous and plaintive.

"How can I leave without thanking them, saying good-by?"

"With your emotional nature keyed up to its present pitch, you can't trust yourself to say good-by without slopping over, undoing in advance all the good you're going will do. You can say all that's needful later, by letter. Need any money?"

"Thanks; I've got a few dollars left from a sale I made the other day. It wasn't much of a story, so it wasn't much of a check, and I owed most of it to Andy—but I've got enough left to see me to Boston."

"Good!" Pentecost saw Dalzell reach for his hat, and rose with his best office manner. "Well!" he heartily said, "that's settled. Glad we agree. If there's ever anything I can do for you, drop me a line. Good-night, my boy—good luck to you!"

But Dalzell wavered. There were one or two little things he wanted to get. Through the murk as he came to the gate Mary's voice called: "Is that you Andrew?" Then she said: "It's you, Tom!" He gulped hard, gave a speechless nod. "I thought you were Andrew." She moved a little nearer, peering up in anxiety. "Did you come home with him?" Dalzell produced a "No" that rang so flat it won a wondering frown.

"You haven't—you haven't had a quarrel or—anything—with Andrew, have you?"

"Take you back! Not on your life!" His embrace heightened. "Take you back—when I have you here! Don't be silly!" His eyes burned and suddenly Felicia was frightened, as she realized the depths to which she had plunged.

"Billy, I've been crazy! I don't really love you—not really. I—" It was the truth—she knew now. What a fool she had been! Dick . . .

The boy's face blazed. "Oh, you don't love me! Well, isn't that a damned shame?"

Felicia struggled, but he held her firmly. That was no moon-struck boy she had to deal with, now; it was a man.

"Maybe you'll learn to love me!" he said.

'Reno'; A Story of America's Mad National Dance of Divorce

By CORNELIUS VANDERBILT Jr.

CHAPTER 19

"OH, excuse me" Peg's voice, low and teasing, beside the couple lying on the sand, was like a dash of cold water.

Felicia and the boy sprang apart. Felicia's cheeks crimson in the moonlight. Well, she thought defiantly, Peg couldn't say anything! What about her, with Joe, out there under the trees?

"It's 2 o'clock," the voice of reason spoke from Peg's laughing lips. "Are you two coming home?"

"Let's all go out to the Gold Rush tomorrow night" Billy Blair suggested as they drove back to Reno. "Felicia's never been there!"

Peg shrugged. "Might's well keep it up while we still have our youth!"

The Gold Rush entertains a heterogeneous crowd; ranchers, miners, gamblers, men from Below the Line, tourists, divorcees and the younger set of permanent residents. Some 40 miles beyond Reno, it lies on the California-Nevada state-line and a painted band bisecting the dance floor permits one to be serious that one foot is in Nevada, while the other dances gaily in California.

Perhaps it was the example of the older people; perhaps it was because they were confined beneath a roof, but all of them were drinking more—much more—than usual. Peg was becoming silly, giggling at nothing at all.

Billy slipped unobserved from the table, when he returned, a little unsteady on his feet, he swung Felicia out to the dance floor. The music stopped; they were near a door and he led her through it. She looked at him questioningly.

"Want to talk to you," he muttered. "Can't talk to you down there."

"But where are we going, Billy?"

He paused, swayed. "Don't you trust me, Felicia?"

"Of course I do! But——"

"Then come along!"

He pushed open a door, led her inside, closed the door behind them. A little room, dimly lighted, with a table and chairs. Highballs awaited them, and with an air of formality the boy pulled out a chair for Felicia.

"I'm tired of that gang!" he grumbled. "Oh, Felicia, I'm so crazy about you! You've got to let me tell you! You've got to listen!"

She sipped her drink, looking at him uncertainly over the rim of the glass, trying to bring her eyes to focus on his face. "But what'll the others think? They——"

The others thought nothing at all; they were in no condition for thinking. Dick Stuyvesant and Sam Lanier, hiking back from the claim and halting to recover their wind, peered at the Gold Rush as they explored the mountain afoot, strode into the noisy room for something to eat and drink before resuming their trip home.

Peg's giggle rose shrilly, and Dick looked at her disapprovingly. What would the Hodges think if they knew that their child was in such a place, at such an hour—and drunk? What would Felicia think?

The only vacant table was next to that which Felicia had left, and the two men sat down. Peg's hazy eyes traveled without recognition across Dick's face.

"Good Lord!" muttered Dick. "Wouldn't you think those kids—" His voice died away. His eyes were riveted upon Peg's table.

That bag, of rose and gold embroidery, lying there— Could there be more than one—more than the one he had seen Felicia carry! There were two empty chairs, pushed back, chairs which obviously had been occupied not long since!

His head whirled. Felicia couldn't be here! It was impossible! Yet memory of his apprehensions at leaving her, in that strange, drifting mood which had come over her after her child's return, was strong.

"Excuse me," he said, brusquely, to Lanier, and went out of the room. Apprehensively, he searched the grounds, returned to the dance-floor and stood, uncertainly, wondering what he should do.

Just up the stairs that ascended behind him, in a closed room, Billy Blair had pushed back his chair and lifted Felicia from hers.

"Do you know how much I love you?" he was demanding, over and over. "Do you! Do you?"

Felicia stood very still beneath the storm of his kisses, wondering at a change within her heart. Last night it had all seemed so different. . . . "Billy, you mustn't! You must take me back to the rest." Did she mean it? Was she lying to herself again?

Felicia kept perfectly still. "Billy, if you don't let me go this minute, I'm going to scream!" she said. Fumes of her many drinks swirled from her. She was sober now, and cold with dread.

With the strength of terror, Felicia pushed him away from her—and screamed, loud and shrill, a scream that went clattering down the wooden staircase, reverberating in Dick's ears.

Quick Success

Few girls in pictures have made such rapid strides toward success as has charming New Yorker, Jill a few months ago she was given her first job, shadowing a star. Within three hours, she had a real part in the picture—"The Lovers of Sunya."

Miss Bayard says: "I am told my selection of a shampoo is to my perfect skin and lovely hair. I've really never taken much trouble with either. For my hair I use the simplest method of any girl. I know here in New York are so enthusiastic about. It's so easy. All you do is put a little Danderine on your brush each time you use it.

"This method is just what a busy girl needs. It's so easy and keeps your hair and scalp so clean you don't need to shampoo half so often. I am letting my hair grow and find the Danderine makes it soft and easily manageable. I can arrange it any way I want and it stays that way. All my friends are complimenting me on the appearance of my hair nowadays, because Danderine has brought out all its natural color and made it so soft and lustrous."

Danderine removes the oily film from each strand and makes dull, stringy hair gleamy, soft, easy to dress. It tones and refreshes the scalp; helps us to control dandruff. It is delicately fragranced; isn't sticky or oily; doesn't show. All drug stores have the generous 35c bottles.

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

ASSISTING AT CONTRACT AND AUCTION.

SOUTH bids one Spade at Auction. Even without a side trick, an opening bid of a five-card suit headed by Ace-King is sound, since with such suit alone there is the probability of making four tricks, of which two are quick tricks.

West passes. Although holding 3½ quick tricks, the requisite number for a defensive bid, West has no suit sufficiently strong to bid, nor can he bid No Trump with Spades unprotected.

North passing, East bids two Clubs defensively. South passes, lacking the six probable tricks necessary for a rebid without hearing from partner.

West passing, North, with five probable tricks in support of Spades, bids two Spades, prepared to assist a second time if necessary. The bid ensures the contract, with South the Declarer.

South bidding one Spade at Contract and West passing, North, holding five probable tricks in support of Spades bids three Spades, showing at once his two assists.

The play of this hand will be described in tomorrow's article.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

THANK YOU, MR. GOOGLE! I HAVE COME TO ASK YOU A VERY PERSONAL QUESTION·
MR GOOGLE! I WILL HAVE NO THIEVING—ANSWER ME AS QUICKLY AND AS BRIEFLY AS YOU CAN— HAVE YOU AND MRS. KLOT EVER MET BEFORE?
LISSEN, HORSEFACE— LET GO OF ME!! THERE'S NO REASON FOR YOU TO GRAB ME—AS YOU'D GRAB A THIEF— WHAT'S EATING YOU ANYWAY?
I BEG YOUR PARDON, MR. GOOGLE, PLEASE FORGIVE ME. I'M OVERWROUGHT AND WORRIED AND NOT ENTIRELY RESPONSIBLE FOR MY ACTIONS— OH, THIS WORRY WILL KILL ME!
DE BECK

IN THE MARRIAGE OF HORACE KLOT TO THE WOMAN WHO WAS AT ONE TIME THE WIFE OF BARNEY GOOGLE, FATE HAS FORMED ANOTHER TRIANGLE. A TRIANGLE THAT THREATENS TO RUIN THE HAPPINESS OF ALL THREE.

MRS. KLOT, BY HER RIGHTS AS A CITIZEN CALLED UPON THE "KNOW-ABOUT-LAW" MR. ARKANSAW HYDE, FROM THE TIMES THAT FOUND HER TO A MAN SHE BELIEVED DEAD AND MARRIED AGAIN, AS WAS HER PRIVILEGE. BUT SHE RESCINDED WITHOUT FATE, THE MASTER JOKESTER, WHO CONTRIVED TO BRING ABOUT THE REAPPEARANCE OF HER FORMER HUSBAND AT A MOST EMBARRASSING TIME—HORACE KLOT, NOW HUSBAND OF BARNEY GOOGLE'S FORMER WIFE, DOES NOT KNOW THAT AT ONE TIME SHE AND BARNEY WERE MARRIED AND IF HE KNEW, IT WOULD PERHAPS CLOUD THE FUTURE HE THOUGHT WOULD BE SO SUNNY.

NOW IF THESE FACTS NEITHER BARNEY NOR MRS. K. WISHES TO TELL, BUT THE QUESTION ARISES AS IT HAS SO often before in cities: triangles—is it right to ruin the happiness of another, when one has nothing to gain by so doing, or should one tell regardless the truth, no matter how painful, should be told, no matter what the consequences?

'THE ROAD TO ENDOR'; BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE, A FINE, THRILLING SIX-DAY NOVEL

I not go back and take her?"

"Why not?"

Streator's voice! Streator himself at his elbow, a presence as astounding as forbidding; from the blasted light of his countenance Dalzell flinched, recoiling at the pluck of a fear more unmanning than mere cowardice of the flesh. "Andy! In Heaven's name—what—how—?"

"Do you pretend to wonder?" Streator grimly mocked him—'are you brazen enough to pretend you don't know what I want of you?—the answer to that question you've just asked of God—"

"Andy—!"

"Be silent!" One of Streator's hands shot out and clamped down on Dalzell's shoulder. "Why don't you go back," he demanded in his pulpit tones of thunder, 'and take her away with you, all of her? You have made her yours, body and soul."

"It's a lie!" The sense of guilt that had palsied Dalzell passed. "A lie!" he screamed in fury. "D'you hear—you lie! She's as pure as she was the day I met her. But that's no fault of yours, you—Let me go!"

His words ran out in a gurgle. Streator without warning had taken him by the throat. "You tell me that? God," the husband prayed, "damn you for a lying coward and thief!"

His thumbs dug deep into Dalzell's throat, he shook him off his feet. And Dalzell in the shadow of death rallied and fought like a maniac for life, rained blows on Streator's face that blinded and for a moment dazed the man, somehow broke his hold, flung himself backward half a dozen paces, slipped on fog-greased grass, and sprawled. As he struggled up to his knees, Streator fell upon him, and grappling they rolled, kicked, gouged, tore at each other's throats, panting and snarling like brutes in a pit.

And then the minister gave a cry of horror, and covered his eyes as if to shut out the picture of Dalzell, his spread body black against the lurid curtains of the fog, snatching at empty air as he reeled back over the brink of the precipice near which they had been struggling.

Calm . . .

The name of the first murderer smote upon his understanding with a sound so clear and awful Streator could have believed a living tongue had breathed it to his ear.

"O, Andrew!" his wife greeted him, "I've been so worried . . . Where have you been?"

"I went for a walk on the Barrens," he evenly related—'got caught by the fog and lost my way. It was only just now begun to clear."

"But — Andrew!" — perplexity quickened his wife's accents—'what is the matter? Aren't you coming to bed?"

"I am going to sleep in the spare room tonight." Streator replied, 'I am very tired. Good night."

In the street outside she followed: "Why, wouldn't you come in at least to say good night to me, when I've been so worried? I've got something to tell you . . ."

"Have you?" in spite of himself Streator had a tone remotely mocking, with a strange, dark smile. "Perhaps I know already . . ."

"What can you mean?" She came a step toward him, but checked as if it were his regard forbade her. "Do you mean you met Tom Dalzell? he told you he was leaving us. He went away for good tonight—"

"Oh! did he?" The husband managed an effort of fatigued indifference. "I'm not surprised. Is that all you wanted to tell me?"

"No: there's something else, something . . . But"—Mary again moved a pace toward him, again halted in distress—"when you look at me like that, treat me so strangely—"

He could endure no more. "Tomorrow, then," he brusquely settled—"or whenever you make up your mind. Good night."

Even when the rumor of her weeping quieted and there was silence, he could not pray; the sin he had done was like a great wall raised up between his soul and God. How was he then to judge her?—he to whom Christ pitiful was calling down the ages:

He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her.

The moon at its first fulling after that night of terror on the cliffs saw Tom Dalzell return, or (so it was his shade come back to walk its glimpses)

When at length it stood in the shelter of a clump of lilacs that had long since shed their blossoms, near by one of the windows, lustreless limplight falling through the screen picked out the salient contours of Dalzell's face, more pinched than it had ever been and darker, and with a look in the eyes of starvation such as merely belly hunger never bred.

The hand that fumbled at the lips was dun and shaking, but those starved eyes were constant to the window that revealed in her chair by the sitting room table, Mary Streator alone and idle, her sewing neglected in her lap, she sat blue eyes dim with an immortal dream, barely parted lips, shaping the promise of an unborn smile —the thought that lay so close and warm to her bosom lending her countenance the transplendence of a spirit exalted.

The secret watcher marked that look and knew it, divined its source even before, recalling herself, the woman took up her work again and the nature of the garment could be seen. He gave them to the hush of the night, not knowing what he did until too late, the groan of a heart from which all hope had been torn.

Three strides, no more, from Dalzell, Streator halted as if in some unspoken bidding. His head came up sharply, his gaze went direct to Dalzell's moon-bleached face. Dalzell, himself momentarily incapable of lifting a hand, saw Streator's jaw drop, his eyes grow wide with horror, saw him step back, at the same time flinging up an elbow to shield his eyes from the thing of dread they saw.

Then the minister staggered backward over a half-buried root caught at a low limb to save himself, reeled against the trunk of the tree, and covered his face with a hand. He cried out in a strangled voice—incoherently to the only ears that heard.

When he fought down his terrors and found courage to look again, the place was empty where the vision of Tom Dalzell had been, there was nothing living in the orchard other than himself and Fear.

When they brought the new-born child to him and put it in his arms, Streator was prepared for the ordeal.

But his poring gaze descried in those miniature features no trace of the likeness he had so feared to see.

Streator's heart was broken, its pent stores precipitately gushed forth in a flood that all but literally swept him feet from under him. As it was, he stumbled when hastily he thrust the pillowed burden back into its nurse's arms and with a broken mumble of apology fled the sitting-room.

Pentecost, quietly opening the door to the study some time later, saw the long body of his friend half seated in the desk-chair, half thrown across the desk, and all racked with sobs. As quietly the country doctor closed the door and, with a nod, a sigh, a smile of weary satisfaction, left the father to make in his own time the new terms with life its new conditions demanded.

It was in a meek spirit of repentance that Streator went up to his wife as soon as they would admit him to her chamber.

She had brought up the question, delightful altogether to debate, of what name they should give their son.

In the upshot the boy was christened Dalzell and Dalzell only.

To the mother the child was thenceforward Dal, and it was as Dal-that Gosport knew him—"Dal Streator, the minister's son" came in course of time to be one of its bywords.

The Autumn that followed Streator's discovery of his son's infatuation with the Comedie Humaine of Monsieur de Balzac saw Dal launched on the first of a series of boarding-school experiments that ended uniformly in disappointment and disgrace.

He came home, expelled for the last time, one clear, warm day of May.

He landed at the bar of a speakeasy. Dan Penny, a lantern-jawed youth a year older than Dal, hailed him with delight. So did the bartender, a cousin of Peter Berea.

"Well, Dan cried, "if you ain't a sight for sore eyes . . . Where'n time'd you drop from?"

"Oh!" Dal replied, elaborately casual, "I got sort of sick of school and thought I'd lay off a spell and see how you were behaving yourself."

"Sick—eh?" The Penny boy cocked his head at a knowing angle. "The usual complaint, I guess."

"You win the first guess, then," Dal confessed. "I just got off the trolley and saw your car parked outside and thought maybe you'd give me a ride up home."

"Surest thing you know," Dan heartily assented. "But I guess you ain't in any hurry. Have a drink first. I don't know," Dal demurred. "I ought to be getting home—"

"You'll be getting hell's bells from your old man when you do; so what's the rush? Joe, give Dal a good stiff jolt of red likker—he's going to need it by the time he meets his loving father face to face."

"Sure." The bartender slapped whisky glass on the bar and turned suggestively toward the rank of bottles on the shelf behind him. "Give it a name, Dal."

"I don't know . . ." Dal said, and compromised on beer.

Dan swiggered off the last of his drink. "Chalk it up to me, Joe. Sling; see you tonight sometime." He led the way out to the car. "Say, listen," he said, when he had settled himself behind the wheel, "what's the matter with me and you getting a crowd together for a night and having a celbration? We've got plenty of excuse—ain't we?—with you coming home. I'll get Mort Signorelli or somebody—"

"Why Mort?" Dal objected, frowning.

"He knows all the live ones in town," Dan impatiently explained. "Oh! I forgot you and him don't pull together any too good. Well, how about Wally Henderson? You like him all right, don't you?"

"I'll tip Wally off to round up a flock of skirts, and we'll grab a couple of bottles of good stuff off Joe and go joy-riding out on the Barrens and . . . O boy!"

The exclamation was fruity with innuendo.

"I don't know as I could make it tonight, Dan: my first night home and . . . O you know! . . . everything . . ."

Dan did not directly answer, peevishly getting out to fuss with a stalled engine.

Dal gazed indolently about. Suddenly he sat bolt upright and stared. A young girl was strolling toward the car, a girl he instantly was wearing a frock of cool blue print, modestly fashioned and obviously of inexpensive stuff. If the long legs were still as bony as one remembered them, their new length of skirt was kind.

Passing the car, the girl threw a leisured gaze to Dal. Momentarily her brows knitted, her eyelids slightly contracted—then she recognized him with a smiling nod, as as if involuntarily paused.

The Most Amazing Offer Ever Made!

THE question is often asked, "Why do you not print more literary and musical programs to brighten our social gatherings?"

Recently a delegation, headed by Mr. Arthur Caesar, of the Near East Relief Committee, called and placed the proposition in writing. "The day is long past," said Mr. Caesar, in a neat speech, "when people are satisfied to spend an evening playing such games as Clap In and Clap Out, Jerusalem, or Pin the Tail on the Donkey, etc."

Some hot words were exchanged. We have consulted our attorneys and arranged a schedule of parlor entertainment suggestions, the first of which will appear in tomorrow's paper; or, if not then, later.

STRONG BILL AT B. F. KEITH MEMORIAL

If you are one of those happy persons who can take your Gilda Gray or leave it alone, you will do well into the scheme of things this week at the B. F. Keith Memorial Theater.

The blonde lady of the shimmy has some clever people in her company and some lovely back-drops.

But the palm for carrying the bulk of entertainment must go truly to Herb Williams who can accomplish more, perhaps, by a gesture than Nero was wont to do in the other direction.

NATIVE SON ON BILL

Williams starts them laughing as well as leaving them that way, and he is ably assisted by Joan Halpin, Ronald Fielder and Basil Whitfield.

Runners-up are Arthur Byron and his wife and daughters in a new farce called "A Family Affair," that serves well to exploit the entire family, one that has been well known on the American stage for years.

Boston and the native son society are well represented on the Keith bill also this week, for Joseph Regan, "Boston's Own Ice-Hub choir singer who subsequently went overseas to become a specialist of parts, through regular operatic channels, is a decided hit.

Although born in Boston, Regan is better known both here and abroad as an Irish-American tenor. However, he has sung "The Duke" in "Rigoletto," "Radolfo" in "La Boheme" and "Almaviva" in "The Barber of Seville."

The tenor obliged with many encores last night and would have provided more in answer to the demand had time allowed.

BIG MOVIE FARE

Acrobats are on the week's bill also in the representation by the Three Lordens in "Lights Out." Theirs is an attractive act with a very reasonable lady filling the gaps with dance steps.

The cause of music is supported by Morgan and Stein in "Red Hot Rhythm," featuring banjo harmony principally and in a manner that truly radiates warmth.

In the movie section of the bill, there is the regular newsreel and the motion picture play "Gertie," whose players move through a series of unreal situations. Marion Nixon, Eddie Quillan, Albert Gran and Gaston Glass are featured in the movie.

GLAMOROUS GILDA HERE

Gilda Gray, the girl that did a solo dance that was heard around the world, appears personally at the Keith Memorial in the motion that made her memorable. There are others, too, of the same persuasion, in a dance act of Gilda's own devising.

MANY STARS IN ORPHEUM FILM

D. W. Griffith has chosen the romance of the low and the high born as the theme for his "Lady of the Pavements," now showing at Loew's Orpheum. It is a synchronized film with singing and talking sequences. Lupe Velez, one of Hollywood's newest stars, William Boyd, Jetta Goudal, George Fawcett and others contribute notable performances.

The vaudeville headliner is "Collegiana," a peppy and entertaining act presented by Val Irving and Mae Wynn, singers and dancers of ability and a talented 7-girl band led by Marie Lamp. Barrett and Cuneen provide a good measure of comedy in their "nut" comic turn.

Vincent O'Donnell, billed as the "miniature John McCormack," caught his audiences with an appropriate list of songs. Frank Whittier and company are seen in a complicated comedy skit, while the Romas troupe, a quintet of comic acrobats and tumblers round out a satisfactory stage bill.

Peggy's Near-Fiance Gets No Book Solace

London, March 12 (INS)—Although his former wife is married to someone else and his crashville near fiancee, the much-married Peggy Hopkins Joyce, isn't even that any more, Lord Northcliffe has found solace in his books. He will sell his library of 113 rare volumes at auction on March 27, it was learned today.

'MERRY WHIRL' 'TWIN BEDS' AT GAYETY ST. JAMES

"The Merry Whirl," now at the Gayety, is loaded with novelties, replete with specialties, and so full of humor that the catchy songs and witty dances hardly give the audience a breathing spell.

The songs and dances in themselves are of unusual quality, and the series of specialties offered by practically every member of the cast deserve praise. Sweets of the sour counter-attractions, the show is primarily a fun show.

Art Gardner is the featured comedian, but he was not alone. Marie Breen, a piquant blonde, danced and sang her way into popularity.

Heine Plagiarized Conan Doyle Novel

Brussels, March 11 (AP)—Word was received today that Frank Heine, alleged forger of the purported Franco-Belgian military treaty, had been convicted by a Dutch court of plagiarizing a novel by Conan Doyle.

Damages of 1000 francs were assessed against him.

Continuing Shows

GRETA GARBO IN ANOTHER HIT AT STATE

Greta Garbo and Lewis Stone, two actors who can give many points to their Hollywood confreres, are at Loew's State this week in a cinema drama called "Wild Orchids." Nils Asther supplies the third person in this shadow triangle, and his acting never matches that of the actual stars.

Given a slight story, a fine locale and long drawn out plot and some immensely clever direction, Miss Garbo again gives one of her famous performances. Here is an actress who never plays in the usual Hollywood pattern, who never grins or grimaces, who plays her parts with admirable restraint, and never fails in anything she attempts.

Mr. Stone has a hard role, that of an American Babbitt-like husband who goes through Java without ever noticing it, and does not suspect that an intrigue is budding between his wife and the Javanese prince. Mr. Stone, as usual, does as well as he can, and betters the interpretation any other actor could or would give the role.

There are some remarkable shots of Java and its natives as well as interior sets that are some of the best yet.

Greta Garbo

Matinee Friday of Chauve Souris

This is the last week of Chauve Souris at the Majestic. The season's sale is so large that Morris Gest has arranged for another extra matinee to be given next Friday. This will be one of the usual "surprise" performances that Gest and Baieff know how to do. It will be in honor of some one, as usual. The honor guests will be Gilda Gray and Arthur Byron, and also the ladies of the ensemble of the musical pieces in town. In honoring the chorus ladies, Gest had in mind the many big stars who were graduated from its ranks, many of whom were discovered and developed by Gest.

Coming Events

Jane Cowl will enter her last week at Boston next Monday with "Paolo and Francesca."

"The Ringer," the latest of Mr. Clive's importations, will have its first performance in America at the Copley next Monday.

"Wooden Kimono" will be the attraction at the Keith-Albee St. James next week.

Grant Mitchell in "All the King's Men" will move into the Hollis on Monday, April 1.

The National Opera Company will begin an engagement of two weeks at the Boston Opera House on Monday, April 8.

CAR INSURANCE BILL AIDS ZONE 2 OWNERS

By FRANK A. GOODWIN,
Former Registrar of Motor Vehicles and Author of the Goodwin-Boston Evening American Automobile Insurance Bill.

Representatives of the insurance interests have made the manifestly absurd contention that compulsory insurance rates for motor towns and cities are higher than for other towns and cities because the car owners of the former areas are more careless and negligent than those of the latter areas.

The falseness of this argument is plainly apparent. Massachusetts citizens and Massachusetts car owners are alike, no matter where in the Commonwealth they live.

All statistics thus far compiled have clearly pointed to one conclusion; namely, that accidents are most frequent where there is the most congestion and that congestion is largely caused, not by car owners of the congested district, but by drivers from cities and towns where congestion is less.

It must be apparent to everyone that, under the present compulsory insurance law, Rate Territory One includes the cities and towns where congestion is greatest.

Now let us see what makes up Territory Two. In that area, we have Arlington, Belmont, Brookline, Dedham, Malden, Medford, Milton, Newton, Quincy, Watertown and Winchester.

Could the true Brookline men on the insurance committee admit that car owners of their town are more careless than those of Clinton, Fitchburg, or Pittsfield? Of course not!

Yet Brookline owners pay $47 to insure their Fords, $62 for such cars as Packards, $138 for light trucks, and $160 for heavy trucks—while the car owner who lives in Pittsfield pays $14, $28, $39, and $53 respectively for the same classes of machines.

Why do the owners in Territory Two get into more accidents than those in Territory Five.

Because the cities and towns of Territory Two are gateways to Boston, Revere Beach, and Nantasket Beach.

Car owners all over the State are now being rated for insurance premiums because of the geographical location of their homes, not because of their relative carefulness or negligence as automobile operators.

The cities and towns that are included in Territory Two are large and populous communities with a population of about 350,000, and it is a very strange thing that, from all this big district, only two legislators were placed on the insurance committee.

A still stranger circumstance is that both of them are from Brookline and neither of them was on the insurance committee last year.

Week's Features

BOWDOIN—"The Trail of '98," with Dolores del Rio, Harry Forbes and Karl Dane, and "Honor First."

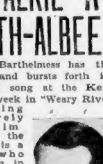
BARTHELMESS IN 'TALKIE' AT KEITH-ALBEE

Richard Barthelmess has tired of silence and bursts forth into speech and song at the Keith-Albee this week in "Weary River," semi-talking and entirely musical film. Richard, the plot says, is a gangster who chews gum in the most insidious way; gets himself into jail, then breaks, blusters, reforms, and emerges as leader of the prison orchestra and composer of "Weary River."

This composition, according to the plot, is what Tin Pan Alley calls a smash hit, and Mr. Barthelmess proceeds to sing it no less than four times during the film. At least, he possibly sings it. There are two schools of thought on that parlous point.



Dick Barthelmess

Thereafter, Richard is let loose from the Big House and proceeds to enter vaudeville, billed as "The Master of Melody." More trouble immediately begins for him and lasts until the film fades out. Even then there is some doubt as to the way our hero will earn his keep—maybe he went to Hollywood to write theme songs for the movies!

On the sidelines in this drama and indulging in conversation but no song are Betty Compson and George Stone, capable actors both.

For stage favorite, the Keith-Albee features Ruth Mix, Tom's daughter no less, in an act concocted for her by the clever Mr. Will Rogers. Other acts and films fill out the bill.

3192 More Names Added to Petition for State Fund

Frank A. Goodwin, former State registrar of motor vehicles, today turned over to the joint legislative committee on insurance 3192 additional signatures to the petition asking the Massachusetts Legislature to pass the Goodwin-Boston Evening American automobile compulsory insurance bill to supply such insurance at cost.

This makes a total of 21,196 signatures to the petition now in the hands of the committee.

Stars Aplenty in New Warner Music Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, March 12—Meet Stepin Fetchit, if you haven't already met him. He is our first negro star in the movies and you're going to hear a lot about that young man. After his success in Hearts in Dixie, Sol Wurtzel signed him up pronto. You can't blame Wurtzel or any of the Fox executives, for after his work as the lazy "Gummy," he goes into history as one of our best comedians.

What a part he will have for his first starring vehicle. He plays the role of a roustabout with a traveling medicine show.

I CAN personally vouch for the fact that "On With the Show," the Warner Brothers production with Alan Crosland directing, will be plenty of catchy song numbers. I watched the rehearsal on the sound stage and saw a revue of pretty girls dance and heard a chorus of excellent voices singing the new songs.

The cast selected for this all-talk, technicolor, musical comedy is enough to give almost any casting director a nervous indigestion after paying the salaries. There is Betty Compson, Sally O'Neil, Louise Fazenda, Joe E. Brown, John Davidson, William Bakewell, the Fairbanks Twins, Arthur Lake, Wheeler Oakman, Sam Hardy, Lee Moran, Thomas Jefferson, Harry Gribbon, Josephine Houston, Henry Otto Hoffman, Ethel Waters. Perhaps you are wondering how this headliner can be in one picture. Let me hasten to tell you it is a story of a show within a film, in other words, a backstage story of backstage life, embellished with singing and dancing.

"THE CISCO KID" and you know whom I mean without telling you. I am speaking of Jane Baxter who created the role of "In Old Arizona" and who is going to repeat it in "The Cisco Kid." But before he stars in the part you will see him in "Behind the Curtain," a Fox special with Jack Cummings directing and Edmund Lowe in the leading feminine role.

• • •

WHAT need George Gillespie, cowboy from Phoenix, Arizona, who married a Chicago heiress, as about the only thing wanting is a job in the movies now and he may be a Western star one of these days. Ken Maynard took Gillespie along when the company left on location to Lone Pine, some 300 miles from here. Gillespie can ride, throw a steer and do any of the things real cowboys do so naturally he ought to be right at home in "The Wagon Master," a Western thriller with all the trimmings.

• • •

BY the time I reach Chicago, I expect that Raoul Walsh will have his crest all selected for "The Cockeyed World." Marie Prevost and Lily Damita are being interviewed by the busy Mr. Walsh these days for the two leading roles, and unless one of those 11th hour changes of mind occurs, I think it is reasonably certain those two young ladies will add the feminine interest to the picture. Feminine interest is right, with these two gals in the cast.

• • •

IF Jack Dempsey still has a hankering to become a movie actor he may be interested to hear "Ringside" has been purchased by Radio Pictures and will be filmed with Madison Square Garden as the background and with a real prize fight for atmosphere. Before the death of Tex Rickard and some months before Dempsey became a fight promoter in Miami, there was talk that he and Rickard might produce "Ringside" independently.

• • •

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Mrs. Peg Talmadge and Mrs. Phyllis Daniels playing a game of bridge. Daughter Bebe at a nearby table deep in auction bridge. Marion Davies invited to play the leading role in one of the biggest productions of a certain company. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer declining to lend her. Charlie Chaplin celebrating his recovery by going for a drive. Buddy Rogers calling on June Collyer. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

'47' WORKSHOP HAS RADIO COMEBACK

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor.

THE RADIO THEATER GUILD, comprising former members of Professor George Pierce Baker's 47 Workshop at Harvard, has begun production of a series of the most significant plays of the day, and is presenting them each week through WBZ-WBZA. These plays every Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 are expected to interest a far-flung audience which has for some time been deprived of the professional touch of the famous Cambridge Workshop.

The first play by the Radio Theater Guild, broadcast this afternoon from the Hotel Statler studios of WBZ-WBZA, is "The Finger of God," by Percival Wilde. The cast is as follows: Strickland, Frederick C. Packard; Benson, his valet, R. H. Jones; A Bird Artist, Mansur. Selection of the plays to be broadcast are made by Frederick C. Packard, assistant professor of public speaking at Harvard University. Professor Packard is also directing the various presentations and in several of the plays he will have parts.

CONFIDENTIAL GUIDE

TONIGHT'S Confidential Guide to the radio follows. Chain features include many old favorites, and a few of the new ones which have quickly established a popular acceptance.

6:30—WBZA—Savannah Liners. Tunes of the sea, played presumably by a ship's orchestra, but don't let that discourage you.

7:30—WNAC—Mobo Entertainment. Mo and Bo, blackface comedians, back on the air.

9:00—WNAC—Old Gold Program. Paul Whiteman and his Band. Solid gold.

9:00—WEEI—Eveready Hour. Variety concert devoted to miscellaneous musical entertainment and vaudeville.

9:00—WBZA—Three-In-One Theater. Burlesque sketches in which some of the oil company is always saved by a can of oil. Usually amusing. Tonight it's Diogenes and his lantern.

10:00—WNAC.

10:00—WBZA—Williams' Synco-matics.

11:00—WNAC—Wrigley Hour. Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians. Always surpassing expectations.

11:00 — WEEI — Radio - Keith-Orpheum Program. Harry Langdon, Chief Roaring Thunder and Archbishop Jane and Katherine Lee, and other vaudeville stars in an hour of variety.

Halts $500,000 Suit Against U. S. Heiress

Camden, N. J. March 12 (AP)—Vice-Chancellor Edmund B. Leaming of chancery court, has refused to confirm the decree of a French court under which Miss Raditeha vitch, a Serbian, seeks $500,000 from Winifred Hill Smith, Bridgeton, N. J., heiress, on an alleged contract binding a common-law bridegroom.

Raditchevitch, an interpreter in Paris, alleged that in a pre-nuptial contract he and Miss Smith had agreed to share all property each acquired.

As the result of a widespread insistence by admirers of Charles Townsend Copeland, a portrait of the professor of rhetoric and oratory at Harvard has been presented to the Harvard Club of New York.

The painting was done by Charles Hopkinson, '91, and is now on exhibition at the Guild of Boston Artists, 162 Newbury st.

Noted Graphologist

PLEASE tell me if it would be worth my while to take up dancing. I am very fond of it. I am still going to school but through sickness I lost a lot of time. I am ashamed now because it will be three or four years before I can graduate and I am already 13 years old.
IRENE, Dedham

told me if I'd take up dancing a lot of time

There is really some of the feeling for rhythm in your handwriting, Irene, which gives assurance that the writer may become a dancer, but I do not think that I ought to encourage you to be a dancer, for this reason:

I know you think now that you would, but this is largely due to the hurt pride which makes you hate to go on struggling to regain your place in school, and not so much to an honest and positive leaning toward the profession.

Your handwriting shows me that you are going to be one of the people who will continue to grow up for a long time, what science calls a slow developer.

This is not a reproach but, on the contrary, indicates a big range in which your mind will operate. My advice to you therefore, is to buckle down hard to school work and to determine to conquer it.

You will want some far different career, Irene, by the time that you are fifteen, and will be thankful that you did not become a dancer.

You really have a fine mind. Make it up, then, and drive it to action.

NOTE: Send sample of your handwriting to Miss Louise Rice for analysis. To cover clerical costs enclose 10 cents in silver or stamps. Also enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The individual analysis will be returned to you within a period of one or two weeks. Letters will not be published if sender so requests.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

Eliza? Not So Hot

Crossed the Ohio on the Ice But Never Tried Causeway Street at 5 P. M.

Fifty thousand persons enter or leave Boston every weekday by way of the new North Station. Coming or going, they face their gravest problem and most serious danger in crossing Causeway Street.

In such confusing cross currents of trucks, taxicabs, plain automobiles and horse-drawn vehicles as is encountered nowhere else in Boston, these travelers, young and old, men, women and children, set out to get to the other side.

At certain hours the swarms are headed in both directions, while cabs and cars make right or left-hand turns. By comparison, Eliza's escape on the ice was a promenade on the boardwalk.

It is for the relief of this condition, the wiping out of Boston's greatest traffic menace, that Representative Luke D. Mullen of Charlestown asks for legislation authorizing the city to issue bonds for the construction of an underpass. Borrowing outside the debt limit, the cost of the improvement would be spread over many years.

We do not know why the Boston & Maine Railroad and the Boston Elevated Railway Company should not be compelled to bear their share of the cost—all who risk their lives there are the railroad's and many the railway's customers—but it may be felt that the Boston & Maine has done enough for us in that part of the city, at least for the present, and the city having built all the other subways there should not be serious objection to letting it dig again.

The underspass should be built and the sooner the better. Any legislator who doubts its necessity can be convinced if he will but walk down the hill to the neighborhood of the depot. What he sees there will help him to understand how diseases of the heart have come to take first place among the causes of death in America.

The Mullen bill has been tossed from the Committee on Municipal Finance onto the table of the heavily burdened Committee on Metropolitan Affairs. This committee, we hope, will rise to the occasion. How the work is to be financed is a matter with which our thousands of daily visitors are not deeply concerned, being for the most part inexperienced in such problems. The Legislature can be trusted to handle that.

P. S.—And please, ladies and gentlemen of the Legislature, have your elderly friends in mind in connection with this legislation and write into the bill a provision for ESCALATORS.

Home Rule for Boston

Again Assailed in the Proposal to Have the GOVERNOR Name a Schoolhouse Commissioner

Legislative committee hearings, the dates of which are yet to be announced, will give citizens of Boston an opportunity to be heard on a proposal to have the Governor of the Commonwealth name one of Boston's three Schoolhouse Commissioners.

As things stand today the Commissioners, who select sites and build, equip and repair our school buildings, are appointed by the Mayor.

This method a Special Survey Board, composed of public-spirited men, has found "wasteful," as undoubtedly it has been.

And so the Survey Board recommends a NEW method, with which we have no particular fault to find except in the suggestion that this city must be kept in leading strings and placed under the guardianship of Beacon Hill.

In order that the building and repair of schoolhouses may be "kept free from political control," the Survey Board would have the Mayor name one of the three commissioners, the School Committee name another and the GOVERNOR appoint the third.

We are told that there is nothing here which in any way antagonizes the principle of Home Rule, because the Governor's appointee and the School Committee's appointee could and presumably would be a unit in opposition to the "politician" named by School Street.

That explanation may satisfy estimable people who derive their opinions of politics from books and magazines, but it will make the politician laugh.

Since the turn of the century, only four out of eleven Governors have been citizens of Boston.

The Governor is a busy man, busy with the affairs of a great State. How is HE going to find time to select a Boston schoolhouse commissioner? To whom will he turn for advice? How many will rush to HIM, with UNSOLICITED advice? Will there be politicians among them? Will one or more of them speak for the particular "organization" which has helped to elect the Governor? IS that "politics?"

Some men speak of the State House, when it suits their purpose, as if politics were unknown in that holy place. If they are honest and well-informed they will have to admit that—at least occasionally—politicians have been known to find their way there. Is it not possible, at least, that Politics on Beacon Hill and Politics in School Street might combine against the lone Schoolhouse Commissioner designated by the Boston School Committee?

The Special Survey Board has done a good job for Boston and its schools. Its members are entitled to the sincere thanks of the community. But they do not pretend to be expert politicians, and in an honest effort to defeat and embarrass those who are, they are well on the way to leading them to luxuriant pasturage. If they are not aware of the fact, someone ought to tell them that the Mayor of Boston—ANY Mayor—can elect a majority of the Boston School Committee whenever he takes the notion.

Why should BOSTON be singled out for legislation of this kind? Does the Governor appoint schoolhouse commissioners for OTHER cities? He does not. WHY not?

If schoolhouse commissioners have been negligent, dilatory and wasteful, show them up and kick them out, but let's have done with running to Beacon Hill with complaints that Boston is incapable of self-government.

Already the Governor of the Commonwealth is burdened with the business of Boston to the extent of naming our

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, March 12—Freezing weather and attending physical discomforts bring a spiritual chill to the Bowery and lower East Side. Sidewalks with rocking grandmas, mothers with pulling children and doorways with napping bearded patriarchs are wellnigh deserted.

Youngsters, sewed in garments for the season, no longer make the streets their playground. Everybody moves indoors to peer out upstairs windows at the melancholy desolation. Nothing matters save the arrival of Spring and release from the long isolation.

The East Side's main joy of living is in its neighborliness—the trifling sort of gossip of the small town. On summer days they chatter back and forth from open windows and fire escapes like magpies. But winter seals them in and cuts off this friendly intimacy.

Uptown winter brings a snap and verve, especially along Broadway, Fifth and Park avenues. But among tenements there is mostly brooding. They are ever conscious of the bread lines and those other visible tokens of the misery acute poverty brings.

The usual sullenness of the Bowery is enhanced by the overshadowing elevated structure. The sun, moon and stars are almost strangers. In the foggy light of all night missions blurry figures kneel halfheartedly in prayer. They come chiefly for bread and hot coffee.

In the lodging houses are drooping figures exhausted from heavy labor and three sleeping off the befogging effects of too much "Bowery smoke"—a lethal mixture at 10 cents a shot. In the barber colleges, customers stand in line waiting free applications of hot towels to keep warm.

All dull edges of squalor are pronounced in winter. The most brilliantly lighted windows are those of pawnshops revealing their jinkie jumble. The busiest spots are the cellar reliever shops where one may pawn old garments for still older garments and acquire a few extra pennies.

A PARADOX in the Bowery is the Bowery Savings Bank—one of the richest banking institutions in the world and patronized chiefly by residents of the lower East Side. Which proves the Bowery is not all poverty. It merely shows a ragged sleeve to the world.

IN a number of ways the narrow, twisted streets of Chinatown are the most interesting in the city. The Chinese somehow manage to express a pronounced security above their sordid surroundings. There are no Chinese mendicants, and it is said 80 per cent of them have bank accounts, and most of the older Chinese support wives and relatives in their native land, which cost about a dime a day. Marry in China and see the world!

A CHOP SUEY parlor in Chinatown insists upon diners being shown through their kitchen before a meal is served. It is as spotless as a newly scrubbed pine table top. The cook and helpers are in immaculate white uniforms and the display does add zest to the food. Yet I could never regard chop suey with anything but suspicion.

AN amusing deceit is employed in Chinese shops by clerks. Most visitors address them in pidgin English and receive replies in the singsong manner. The majority of clerks were born in America, many were graduated from Columbia and speak perfect English. But their gentle camouflage heightens the abracn—spell it yourself.

IN a list of instructions to chauffeurs, a rental agency suggests: "Remember to be neat about your neck and shoulders. It is your back view that makes an impression." And that we suppose, after an hour of silent meditation, is why the chauffeur rarely needs a hair trim, but quite often a shoe shine.

THERE seems to be no respect for gray hairs any more. A ragged little street gamin in front of a theater crowd in West 47th at last evening called out to a certain aging newspaper columnist: "Hey, Handsome, what time is it?" And did he turn red!

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

WE have just learned Mr. Hoover's first wise crack as chief executive of rebuttals and vetoes.

While being inaugurated in the rain he turned to Justice Taft and asked:

"What am I, Bill? A President or a bathing beauty?"

Mr. Coolidge is back home again and glad of it. He doesn't have to look at a Senator for breakfast every morning.

Neither does he have congressmen barking outside his door.

After you have been President of the recalls and the stubborn minorities for seven years you must train an owl to hoot you to sleep in the evening.

How would you like to tip your hat continuously for seven long years?

It's a terrific job. Mr. Coolidge's first official act as a private citizen will be to buy a sun-bonnet and knot the strings under his chin.

A sun-bonnet may not be beautiful. But nobody expects you to tip it.

Another nice thing about not being President any more is that you can take a bath without having seven Secret Service men in the tub with you.

And there will not be a Vice-President around to ask Mr. Coolidge how he is feeling every five minutes.

That's courtesy.

But it is not nice to ask the President how he is feeling every five minutes.

That's ambition.

Mr. Coolidge made a great executive. During his terms of office, our national defense was strengthened by 18 cruisers and the famous Iron Horse.

And Northampton, Mass., is a town where a veto will stick. When you tell the milkman his bread is skimpy he doesn't drive the cow into your parlor and demand an extra session.

Cal is entitled to a rest after his seven years in Washington. And Northampton, Mass., is the ideal spot. The nearest traffic cop is paid by Boston.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

At golf, a mighty man is he!
He walks with a lively step.
For his veins are fill of Vitamin B.
And he worships the great god PEP!

He can dance all night, this son of joy,
Like a faun on the hillside, free;
And feel at dawn like a husky boy—
For he's full of Vitamin B!

THE average man needs a lot more love than he deserves. But fortunately, the Lord made women far more eager to be needed than to be "deserved.

One of the great mysteries of life, to modern wives and golf-widows, is why the manufacturers go right on making house coats and house slippers for men.

When a man says, "I never loved like THIS before!" don't doubt him. A man falls in love with so much ease and facility each time that he scarcely recognizes it as the same old emotion.

Many a man who will cheerfully pay any price for synthetic liquor, will balk at paying the price of genuine one-hundred-proof love.

A man's kisses are first careful, then eager, then rapturous, then tender, then casual. But his love is not actually dead until they become dutiful.

A kiss may not amount to much in itself these days, but it is still equivalent to running up the white flag to let the enemy know he surrenders the frontier.

The trouble with the modern love affair is that it is just a little prologue, with an abrupt ending, no suspense, no thrills, no plot and no continuity.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

What we can do for another is the test of powers; what we can suffer for is the test of love.
—Westcott.

—Montaigne.

In losing fortune, many a lucky elf
Has found himself.
—Smith.

Evil is unnatural—goodness the natural state of man. Earth has no hopeless islands or continents. We live in a redemptive world. Poverty will end; sin will die; love will triumph, and hope will plant flowers on every grave.—Swing.

One moment may with bliss repay
—Campbell.

Economising for the purpose of being independent is one of the soundest indications of character.
—Smiles.

Though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

WHY do girls leave home?

What's your guess?

Because they're wayward? In love with some man? Crazy about the bright lights?

No. Wrong on all counts. THEY LEAVE BECAUSE THEY CAN'T GET ALONG WITH THEIR PARENTS.

Col. Frank H. Wise of the Volunteers of America has established this reason after questioning hundreds of girls who left home in 1928. Of all the girls who were given aid by the Volunteers' Home 85 per cent left because that was so.

Does that mean that 20th century parents are more cruel or unreasonable than their predecessors?

No. It simply means that a daughter's chances of getting away and taking care of herself are about 500 per cent better than they were in grandma's day. Grandma had no job to go to. Daughter has. So when things get too hot at home she flits.

But why should things get too hot at home? Why shouldn't daughter realize that "mother knows best" and be accordingly grateful to accept her advice?

BECAUSE MOTHER DOESN'T ALWAYS KNOW BEST, AND DAUGHTER IS KEENLY AWARE OF THIS FACT.

Women can and should continue to expand mentally after they become mothers, but an appalling number of them park their brains as soon as they acquire a bassinette. They are mamas. With the act of giving birth they have acquired the wisdom of Minerva and the big stick of Mussolini, or so they believe, and most of the world agrees with them. As a consequence, by the time their children have reached adolescence, mama's mental equipment is apt to be as obsolete as the dodo. And it doesn't take an observing child long to realize it.

"But I never dreamed of questioning my father and mother!" snorts the indignant elder.

You had nothing to question with my dear. You weren't out in the world as the children of today are. You were not being forced constantly to make comparisons between the antiquated viewpoint and management of your home and the modern society in which you functioned for 14 lively hours of each day. Consequently, mamas and papas retained their air of mystery and authority. But if papas and mamas have mystery and authority today they earn it. Society no longer hands it to them gratis.

Recently a distressed mother wrote: "I have always admired your writings until last night, and now I must protest strongly against the harm you are causing in homes. You said that parents are not always able to decide what is right or wrong for young people, and my rebellious daughter of sixteen immediately quoted you against me in an argument. How dare you say such a wicked thing, Miss Robinson? If you have ever had a child yourself, you must know that parents are the best guides for children."

I have had a child myself, my dear, and never for one minute of his beautiful twenty-one years of life was I sure that I knew what was best for him. I never pretended to be his moral arbiter. I realized from the first that he was born into a freer, wiser, healthier world than the world of my youth and that in many respects he knew far more than I did. So I did not pretend to lay down a moral code for him. I simply gave him all I could of love and service and expected him to do the rest. He did. We were friends.

That, I think, is the only relationship between a parent and child which will make home a happy and desirable place for a boy and girl.

NO ONE ON EARTH SHOULD BE MORE MODEST THAN A PARENT—FEW ARE LESS SO.

Parents may, and often do, know far less about the world in which they live than their working sons and daughters, but they nevertheless feel competent to run a League of Nations, and heaven help the unfortunate offspring who question their ultimatums. It must be their way or none at all.

IT'S ALL VERY WELL TO TRY AND GUIDE YOUR CHILD, BUT DON'T SHOVE. Most parents insist on shoving.

To the same extent we are assessed for the cost of building and maintaining highways which are no more BOSTON highways than the Mohawk Trail is local.

In the opinion of the Boston Evening American, the suggestion that the Governor of the Commonwealth should be called upon to name one of Boston's three Schoolhouse Commissioners IS another blow at Home Rule.

Citizens who feel the same way about it should make themselves heard when the proposal is brought before a committee of the Legislature.

The Hearst Papers Advocate

1. An agreement on an equal basis of English-speaking people to preserve peace between themselves and to promote the peace of the world, but no minority representation in foreign leagues.
2. Proportional representation in the United States Senate—no state to have less than two Senators.
3. Separate departments of Army and Navy and air forces, united under Secretary of National Defense.
4. Vigorous Federal action, under a Secretary of Education, to abolish illiteracy in the United States.
5. Installation of President and of Congress on first of January following election in November.
6. A Federal sales tax, the income from which to be used in reducing other Federal taxation.
8. Construction of Nicaragua Canal for commerce and defense; advocated by Hearst papers since 1895.
9. The acquisition of the French West Indies as part payment for the French debt to the United States, and of the English West Indies also, if agreeable to France and England.
